Attrition to claim 780 steel jobs

JOB CUTS will be made by attrition over the next three years at Granite City Steel, National Steel, parent company of Granite City Steel, plans to reduce its labor force 20 percent by 1988; approximately 780 local jobs. The cutback can be positively viewed, according to Dan Hines, Granite City Steel public relations director. He said Friday the company plans no layoffs to achieve the reduced job level, $1 billion in improvements are planned at the National Steel plants, and the company can provide long-term job stability. After planned cutbacks, Granite City Steel will still employ about 3,020, allowing the company to maintain its position as the second largest Metro-East employer.

Granite City Center sale approved

THE SALE of Granite City High School North was approved Thursday by the Granite City District 9 School Board. Belleville Area College offered $500,000 in immediate cash, $50,000 per year for the next 10 years, five years of free space to District 9 for an automotive shop, and $150,000 in BAC tuition waivers and scholarships to District 9 students for the next 10 years. The BAC Board of Trustees approved those terms Saturday and will buy the property.

Series on downtown concludes Sunday

DOWNTOWN IMPROVEMENTS have already begun in Granite City with the renovation of a building at 1907 Delmar owned by area businessman Dave Schermer, who said, "I don't think the downtown is ready to dry up and blow away." Schermer's attitude that downtown can come back is revealed in the next edition of Granite City's Sunday newspaper. This week, staff writer Susanne Indelicato's series concludes with a look at the beginnings of success downtown.

Reverend, 94, struck and robbed

AN INTRUDER in the home of a 94-year-old Venice minister made off with $700 after striking the pastor with what was believed to be a gun. The Rev. Darris Johnson said he was sleeping June 11 when the assailant jumped on him and demanded money. Johnson replied he had no more money, and the man struck the pastor on the left side of the head. Johnson was treated and released from St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

Nolan resigns from park position

THE DIRECTOR of parks and recreation for the Granite City Park District, Dave Nolan, resigned June 12. Nolan, 33, will take an engineering position at Washington University in St. Louis. His resignation is effective June 21. Nolan offered to work nights and weekends as interim director until the district can find a new director, but the park board did not accept the proposal. "We accept it respectfully," Board President George Sykes said of the resignation. "But we certainly wish you well in the future."

Alderman Garrett pleads innocent

THE PLEA OF INNOCENT to the charge of keeping a place of gambling was entered June 12 by Donald E. Garrett. He was charged May 10 with a misdemeanor following a raid at the Capalero Lounge, 800 Jackson St., Madison. Garrett is an alderman and school board member in Madison, and a member of the Madison County Board.

Quote of the week

"I WANT TO GO to heaven when I die. God's Word tells me I should hold it in me... At the same time, thinking about my head hurting, thinking about that man, I wish I knew who it was. He wouldn't be a free man." — From the Rev. Darris Johnson, 94, Venice, following a home invasion last week when he was robbed of $700 and struck on the left side of his head.

No interim role for park administrator

By DAVE WHALEY
Staff writer

Dave Nolan's proposal to stay on as interim director of the Granite City Park District will not be accepted by the park board.

George Sykes, president of the board, said Thursday the board decided Wednesday that keeping Nolan on "probably wouldn't be the best route to go."

"We just didn't feel it would be good for the district or for Dave," Sykes said. "He would end up working a lot of hours if he was holding two jobs."

Nolan announced his resignation Wednesday night as director of parks and recreation, effective June 21. In his letter of resignation, he had proposed to stay on as interim director, working nights and weekends until a new director was hired.

Nolan has accepted a position as grounds manager and custodial inspector at Washington University in St. Louis. He will start his new job June 24.

Sykes said the board would offer Nolan an advisor's position with the district.

"We have some things we would like Dave to at least help us with," Sykes said. "The Fourth of July carnival is approaching, and at the meeting he brought up the thing about the contracts for the ice rink this winter. And he will no doubt be getting questions of a routine nature from everyone."

Nolan said he was not surprised his proposal was rejected by the board.

"The money would have been nice," he said. "But I think the board's decision shows they have the confidence in the rest of the staff to get the job done, and so do I."

"But because of the added responsibilities it would have put on everybody at the busiest time of the year, I wanted to give them that option to keep me on for a while."

As part of the changeover, Sykes said, the board will consider giving Sue Champion, currently secretary to the director, the title of office manager.

"She's really been doing that job for a while," said Sykes. "We just want to make it official. She would be responsible for things like personnel."

Spillers is assistant superintendent

By DONNA KIMBRO
Staff writer

Richard Spillers, assistant principal of the Madison Middle School, was appointed assistant superintendent of schools by the Madison School Board last week.

The decision was announced after a closed special meeting of the Board of Education on June 10.

SPILLERS WILL succeed Wade James, who is retiring this month after 38 years of service in the Madison school system.

The new assistant superintendent graduated from Eastern Illinois University and came to Madison as a teacher at Dunbar School. He later was named principal of Blair School and then moved to Louis Baer School, where he was a Chapter I reading teacher.

Spillers served as assistant principal at the sixth-eighth grades Middle School for one year. He said he will miss the children but considers the appointment a challenge and a new experience.

"THIS HAS BEEN a rewarding year here working with the principal. I had some apprehension coming to a junior high school, as I heard of difficulties at this school level."

"I have not found it difficult to work with this age student and this experience reaffirms my belief in what Father Flanagan (of Boys' Town) said in the 1940s, 'There is no such thing as a bad boy,'" Spillers said.

Although he was born in Huntsville, Ala., and lived in Indiana, Spillers said he feels like he is a native Madsonian.

"I AM SO TIED in with life here my heart is in Madison and I feel like I never left," the appointee added.

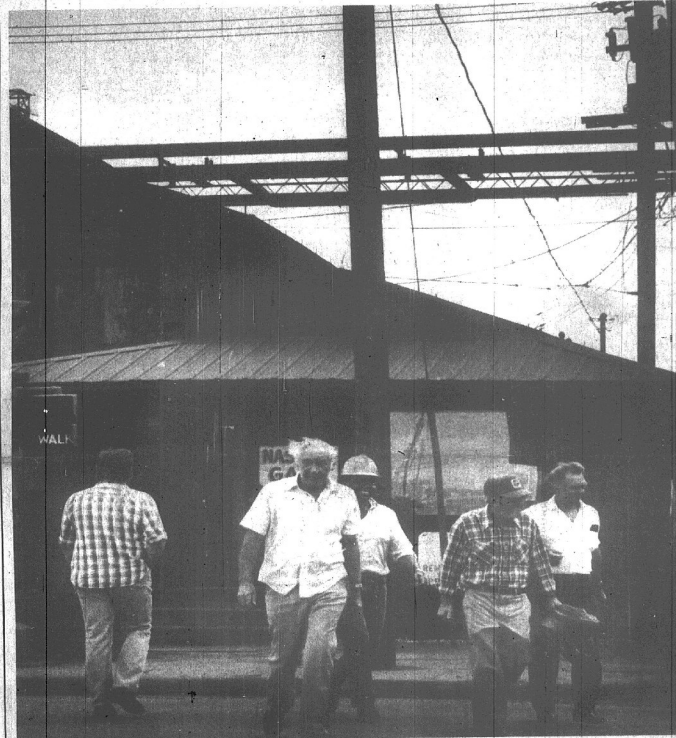

Spillers attended EIU on a track scholarship and held the state record for the half-mile run for a year.

He and his wife, Martha, are the parents of three children, Sonetta, Lasamuela and Ray Henry.

PRIOR to the closing of the Henry Mitchell American Legion Post here, Spillers served the post as its child welfare officer.

He said, "I really enjoyed that."

WORK CONTINUES at a normal pace at the Granite City Steel plant in the wake of news last week the Metro East's second largest employer planned to reduce jobs by almost 800 in the next few years by attrition. Plant spokesman Dan Hines said, however, the company was in for bigger and better things in the near future.

Bridge traffic continues to increase

By VALERIE EVENEDEN
Staff writer

More than a half-million vehicles used the McKinley Bridge in Venice last month, a further upswing in the bridge's traffic count.

Traffic over the Mississippi River span continues to increase at a substantial rate, with 505,921 vehicles crossing the Venice-owned bridge in May, according to figures presented by Bridge Manager Tom Fields at the June 11 meeting of the Venice City Council.

The total showed an average increase of 1,537 vehicles per day, compared to May 1984, Fields said.

HEAVY CONGESTION with westbound traffic flow was observed on the bridge early Friday morning, with a large volume of vehicles backed up across the entire span.

Delays experienced by workbound commuters, however, were not the fault of the bridge, nor the number of vehicles per se, it was learned.

The delays were the result of a malfunctioning traffic signal light at Salisbury and 11th streets in St. Louis.

The culprit is the first signal encountered at the west end of the bridge prior to vehicles entering Interstate 70 to travel to downtown St. Louis.

The backup also prevented drivers leaving the bridge to enter I-70 and head west to the McDonnell Douglas plant and other firms in St.

Louis County.

"THIS IS THE FIRST time in a long time this has happened," Fields said Friday, discussing that morning's traffic jam.

"It is still unclear whether the light fixed itself or the (St. Louis) traffic department did it. We couldn't get over there to see."

The light started working about 7:30 a.m., but it took about 45

Area residents reflect on family history

Vasileff family builds memories

BY EVA VASILEFF JOHANNIGMEIER

It's an interesting but not an unusual happening that a young man from one country in Europe should meet a young woman from another country in Europe and the two marry in Madison, Ill. This is how it came about.

The young man, Docho Vasileff, was born in Dobruja, Bulgaria in 1908. He lived there until he was 15 years old. When his father died, the young man moved to Silistra where he went to work in a soda factory. He was able to save $80. At the age of 18 he began making plans to go to America to escape serving in the army—even at that time he was a conscientious objector. He was offered another job at $100 a year but couldn't take it as an agent for a steamship company had a ticket for him and wanted to get him to America. In Sofia, at the railroad station he and a friend joined a group of students headed for Germany—so they didn't need passports. In Belgrade, Serbia, they bought false passports through their agent. They went on to Bremen and left on a German liner—in St. Louis, after 15 days they reached Baltimore.

He stopped there briefly and then there was work in Galveston. After five days of looking for work and finding none, they decided to head for St. Louis, Mo. The number in the group had increased to six.

Not having money to ride the train they decided to walk along the railroad track from Galveston to St. Louis. One of the men who had money took a liking to Docho and loaned him train fare which was later paid back. The other men made it to Madison on foot.

Docho stayed in St. Louis through the winter, then went to work on the railroad at Red Wing, Minn. He was a socialist in those days and let his hair grow long and bushy. He worked there until October. It got too cold. He had no warm clothes. Rather than buy warm clothing he decided to go south. He ended up in Lincoln Place in John Tarpor's rooming house.

These rooming houses and cottages in Granite City were owned by Macedonian and Bulgarian "kings" who took advantage of their own kind, crowding them into cell-like rooms, which yielded an unusually large rate of return to the landlord.

The rooming houses called "Mercantile houses" were large two and three story buildings akin to hotels. The lower floor contained shops where immigrants could buy food, liquor and clothing; and in some instances, real estate or steamship tickets to Europe. Docho's luck changed after moving on to Madison—where he got a job at the Granite City Steel and he met his future wife, Maria Popa.

Maria was born in 1880 in Sasabesh, located in Austria, Hungary at that time. That village was part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Finally Romania. Maria's mother died at childbirth—her father married again—there were many children—no room for Maria, who couldn't even marry as she had hard working, ambitious young woman. She found work as a maid in the healthy German homes. She was treated kindly—taught how to cook by her mistress. She had a room of her own—was paid $10 per month.

During this time her Uncle Dan from the United States to sell their vineyard. They had gone to the states some years before and were established in Madison. They suggested Maria come to America with them—her father should mortgage their home for her passage. Her stepmother refused so Uncle Dan loaned her the money. They left in September 1909. It was a long ocean trip—12 days in steerage under miserable conditions—everyone was seasick and full of lice. They got off in New York and came by train to Madison. Maria lived with her aunt and uncle—who had a boarding house—where she worked until she got a job at the Slanin Works, putting handles on buckets at 10 cents an hour, 10 hours a day, six days a week. She paid $4 a week room and board and still managed to send a bit to her parents in Romania and to pay off her uncle for her passage. It was at this time Maria and Docho met and married in May 1911. They set up housekeeping in a couple of rooms on 14th and Madison Avenue. Eva was born there in 1912—delivered by Mrs. Wedeg who charged $8.

From there my parents moved to 13th and Madison Avenue in a mercantile building—three stories high with a tavern on the first floor. We lived on the second floor—where my mother had boarders looking for work cleaning their rooms and doing their laundry on a washboard. These men provided the cost of the food and her salary. This was known as the "boarding boss" plan.

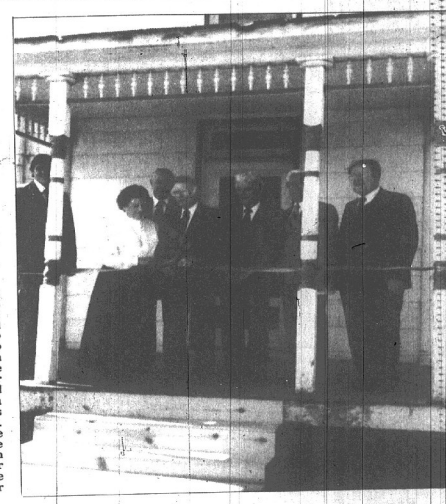

Around this time my parents had saved enough money to go back to the old country—but couldn't because of the first world war. They moved to the middle of 13th and Madison Avenue and went into the tavern and lunchroom business. By that time there were four children: Eva, Vasil, Leo and Nick.

By 1923 they had saved enough money to buy a corner lot on 12th and Madison Avenue, across from Schermer's Department and Grocery Store. They were able to borrow $10,000 and they built a two story brick building with 12 rooms in the parents of Leo and Maria. These rooms were rented to men who were bachelors or whose families were still in the old country. My parents had a restaurant on one side of this building and rented the corner store. There was a large garden along side and a grape arbor back of the building. The restaurant was open every day of the year. My mother said it was the renter's home—she even made Christmas cookies for them and dyed eggs at Easter.

By this time we kids had jobs—in the restaurant—washing dishes, waiting tables, dressing chicks—getting vegetables ready. I was in the family business. My parents paid off—the depression came—the boarders were given room and board on credit. Our parents managed to give us a good education. They were able to retire early.

Fapa died in 1966—78 years old. Mom lived until 1977—almost 88 years old. In 1972 the family had a 50th birthday party for the building on 12th Street—Mom's idea. Mom loved that building—wouldn't move to a smaller home in a quiet neighborhood. In her later years Mom would say, "I never dreamed this old building would be so important to me in my old age." It did!

The Johannigmeier family very much a part of area history

BY EVA VASILEFF JOHANNIGMEIER

Most of the material for this report was taken from the Centennial History of Madison County and its people 1800-1912. The names of the people about Grandpa Johannigmeier were told to me (Eva Vasileff Johannigmeier) by my husband, Howard Johannigmeier.

The German Americans of this country were regarded as the most reliable and esteemed citizens of the land. Where they lived there was sure to be found a substantial home. They usually took great interest in the development of their sources of a community and made for good government.

Among this class was mentioned August Johannigmeier, the founder of East Granite City, and one of Madison County's old and honored pioneers. Grandpa Johannigmeier was born in Germany in 1846. I have heard that Frankfurt was the city of his birthplace. He was the son of Casper and Elizabeth (Install) Johannigmeier. He had one brother, Henry, and five sisters. August Johannigmeier, like many others of his countrymen, saw only a life of hard toil and little remuneration.

which year, seeing the necessity for his farm into city lots and became the founder of East Granite City.

The village of East Granite City grew rapidly and justified his belief in his future. In a short time it had a population of 500, its streets were well laid out and nicely paved. A good street car service had been installed and in 1912 a high school was erected. Grandpa Johannigmeier's successful career proved what could be accomplished by a man who had force of character, business integrity and honesty, no matter how humble his station.

Mr. and Mrs. Johannigmeier were the parents of five children. Two died as infants. The surviving five, Henry, Charlie, August, Ida and Ferdinand, were given good educational advantages. They attended public and German schools and were fitted for whatever position and career they called upon to fill in life.

Henry married Caroline Shrader. He was a bricklayer and lived in East Granite, near the home of his parents. The other four children, Arthur, Alma, George, Ida and Ida married August Ruwisch. He was employed in a rolling mill in East Granite. They had five children, Olga, Alma, Edward, Alfred and Walter.

Bertha married Emil Ramer, a farmer of Nameoki Township. They had no children.

Charlie married Hester Dixon. They had one child, a son, Charles Jr.

In the 30 years that grandpa and grandma Johannigmeier resided in this township, they lived to see the country develop from a raw prairie land to a prosperous farming section and a flourishing commercial community. They did their share in bringing this marvelous development about. They assisted in the work of the German Evangelical Church, which was built on a site which the elder August Ruwisch donated.

Ruwisch was a charter member as was Christian Pieper, father of Mary Johannigmeier. This church was the forerunner of the present St. John's Church.

Ruwisch was a charter member as was Christian Pieper, father of Mary Johannigmeier. This church was the forerunner of the present St. John's Church.

Politically, Johannigmeier was a Republican. But he would cast aside party ties when his judgment told him that another party's candidate was better fitted to look after the public's interest.

It would have been a pleasure to know Grandpa and Grandma Johannigmeier.

Grandma was a charter member of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. John's Church. She was always ready to lend a helping hand in time of need, both in acts of kindness and in words. It was an act of kindness which brought on her sudden death—going out to help someone she contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia.

Grandpa Johannigmeier was a big man—weighing around 300 pounds. He had a large cider press. Farmers from the surrounding area would bring in apples to be made into apple cider.

All in all he was a citizen of whom his community was justly proud, in whom they had utmost confidence. This was justified by his past record for giving influence to the cause of right in every walk of life.

Grandpa died at the age of 88.

Segar family an area for five generations

A recent speaker for Old Six Mile Historical Society was Virginia Segar.

Segar told of five generations of the Segar family in America in the late 1700's on the Big Island in the Mississippi River, known as Chouteau Island. Early records verify the existence of a French settlement on Chouteau Island as early as 1750. The island was named in honor of a Frenchman, Pierre Chouteau.

Jacob Segar came from Wurttemberg, Germany with his wife, Dorothea, and son, Balsar. Another son, John, and daughters Cathy and Sally, were born in America. An early history of Madison County pioneers shows Jacob Segar as the Revolutionary War and became a land owner on Chouteau Island. According to Jacob's will written Dec. 21, 1818 and recorded in the Edwardsville courthouse his two sons, Balsar and John, were to share and share alike in 610 acres of land and remaining estate on Chouteau Island. His two daughters, Cathy Wilkinson and Sally Emmert, were willed $8 each.

Balsar was a prosperous farmer on Chouteau Island an old wood to the riverboat captain. He also made wood shingles which he shipped to St. Louis as numerous steamships made their way through Chouteau Slough and stopped at the island.

Balsar Segar married Polly Emmert in 1826 and to this union were born seven children. Balsar contracted cholera and died during the 1851 flood.

A few years later, John Wesley Segar, son of Balsar and Polly, was looking for the cornerstones of his property and realized he was lost in the woods. Upon hearing a voice he started toward it. It was a young lady calling boys for feeding. The young lady, Josephine Atkins, was visiting her Uncle Amos Atkins and in neighborhood visited him for a couple of days. The young lady, Josephine, and her cherry pie—their courtship ended in marriage, but not until John Wesley had met her family's demands.

Josephine was a lady of high esteem and her family did not want her to live in a log house. So John Wesley Segar built a large two-story frame house near Chouteau Slough which sheltered two generations of Segar's from 1868 until Thanksgiving Day 1911 when it burned to the ground.

One year later on Thanksgiving Day the family moved into a new house built on the same site as the old homestead, only three feet higher than the floodwater mark made on a big maple tree in the front yard. One year flood waters did run in the basement windows but never did they reach the first floor of the new house. The new house was constructed with the latest plumbing and electrical fixtures available in 1916. There was a kitchen sink with running water, electric lights, central hot water heater and a bathroom upstairs with an inside toilet. Miss Segar recalled it was faster and much more fun to slide down the new bannister than to walk down those stairs even though it caused "us to get many spankings." A red tile roof made this white eight room house a landmark on the island. It was torn down in 1948.

When John Wesley married Josephine, they began life on Chouteau Island on the Old Segar Homestead. The Segar family became known for its variety of fruit orchards. He enjoyed experimenting with grafting. Many old timers have told about the huge peaches he raised—"as big as dinner plates." Marketed in the area, the fruit was sold for the fruit but much of it was sold on the farm.

Of the 13 children born to John Wesley and Josephine, six boys died in infancy. The remaining children were Mrs. Eleanor Majors, Julia Maria Schillinger, Jennie Johnson, Mabel Segar, Lucy Bailey, Ferdinand Segar and John Allen Segar (father of Virginia Segar). John Allen was one of twins; his twin died at birth. John Wesley's son, Ferdinand, and John Allen took charge of the farm responsibilities as their father aged. Ferdinand managed and operated the fruit tree nursery. His brother, John Allen, took care of records of sales of produce and all expenses.

Ferdinand Segar was employed by T.J. Camel Orchestra as an accomplished musician. He played a number of different musical instruments including the violin, bass violin, Spanish guitar, cornet, consorlina, banjo and accordion. This orchestra performed in concerts at the Pavilion in Forest Park during the 1903-04 World's Fair in St. Louis. After the World's Fair he continued to perform with the orchestra at garden parties and dances.

Ferdinand married Minnie Stein in 1902 and they had five sons—Ferdinand Jr., who married Sally Wilson; Clarence, never married; Ervin married Dorothy Miller; John married Agnes Luzinski; and Lester, never married. One daughter, Marian, married Clarence Eckerleberger.

John Allen Segar, son of John Wesley and Josephine, married Margaret Lenora Rapp on Dec. 4, 1901. Their children were Margaret, married Walter Baser; Virginia Marian (never married); and Mary Josephine (married George Evans).

Miss Segar recalled how she and her sisters loved to go to Grandpa Segar's so they could dress in those long dresses, padded bosoms, high heel shoes and play house. Nature wasn't the only problem John Allen Segar had to face. In 1940 the Corps of Army Engineers decided to improve navigation of the Mississippi River by building a canal from the north end of the island and joining the river with the locks at Granite City south of the island. The center line of the canal went right through the center of the old homestead. In 1964 the Segar family last piece of the farm was completed—five generations of the Segar family uprooted, but not forgotten.

Trio Unit studies calcium in diet

The June leaders of Trio Unit, Madison County Homemakers Extension, Lucille Sackett and Mary Wilson, served a noon luncheon to the members in the Fellowship Hall of Hope Lutheran Church. The dishes they prepared were recipes from the lesson Calcium In Your Diet: The Delicious Way. Hostesses Lucille Ethieridge, Marge O'Neill and Helen Pfeiffer served dessert.

Chairman Helen Miller called the meeting to order and roll call was answered by 35, including new member Shirley Thompson and a guest, Betty Buehler.

The leaders discussed the recipes they had prepared and also talked on the importance of calcium in the diet with relation to osteoporosis. First Vice Chairman Marjorie Lybarger announced the next meeting will be held July 2 when the lesson will be "Understanding Vision."

Second Vice Chairman Audrey Naby reported on the membership drive victory party held in Edwardsville May 20 and noted the unit now has a membership of 44. Those present were encouraged to invite guests and potential members to attend.

Correspondence included a letter from the county 4-H adviser stating a luncheon and silent auction netted $669. A countywide pizza sale netted $3,800. Mrs. Miller announced the appointment of Louise Anderson as health, safety and citizenship chairman.

The nominating committee, Vivian Forshee and Lucille Sackett, presented the following nominees: Pat Mitchell, second vice chairman, and Emma Jakich, treasurer. Arline Brinkmeyer installed the newly elected officers and those who will serve another year, Helen Miller, chairman, Marjorie Lybarger, first vice chairman, and Ruth Brue, secretary. Each was given an appropriately colored carnation signifying the office.

Lucille Sackett, recreation chairman, led games, with prizes awarded to Lucille Georgeoff, Arline Brinkmeyer and Helen Roessner.

Others present were Norene Byrd, Naomi Chapman, Marie Durbin, Roberta Feder, Rose Kayser, Vera Kirkpatrick, Arminda Lee, June Lux, Ada Matras, Gen McComis, Florence Rapp, Bea Rittenhouse, Helen Robertson, Clara Schillinger, Lucy Stewart, Shirley Goff, Shirley Schillinger and Eva Loman.

Venice Park Board approves Enterprise Zone resolution

By RACHEL NEWSOME

An Enterprise Zone resolution was approved Thursday by the Venice Park Board.

The resolution involves a four-year tax abatement program in portions of Granite City, Madison and Venice to attract new industries or encourage existing firms to expand, increasing local job opportunities. The abatement relates to assessment increases.

THE REAL ESTATE'S assessed valuation remains, but if new business or industry develops, despite the size, the abatement will apply, it was explained.

The assessment bases affected are those of the various taxing bodies approving the zone. Most have given their approval.

The boundaries of the proposal include approximately one-third of Venice, it was noted.

The zone proposal submitted to the state will not be effective unless it is approved by the state government. Action is expected this summer.

ON ANOTHER TOPIC, board members expressed concern about a Venice City Council meeting which was the subject of an article in Thursday's Press-Record.

A quote within the article stated, "If you are not 6-foot-2 and weigh 265 pounds, there's no use going to the park."

"I don't want mine (children) down there unescorted right now, not until things get better. I don't know where the fault lies and I'm not saying those responsible are from Venice, but they are there," a female resident said.

Park board members responded at their meeting to the comments voiced from the audience at the June 11 council meeting.

"THIS IS A SLAP in the face, to me. They should bring it to our attention — this park is safer than the streets," the Rev. John Henry Williams, park president, said.

"We've even hired another park policeman to keep this park safe. I'd like to know about it. Let us know and we'll do something about it. Whoever this person is, I wish they would come to see us and we'll sit down and discuss this," he added.

"If anyone has any problem they should bring it to our attention," Earl Hogan, board member, said.

The new policeman is William M. Boyd. He began working this week.

"WE HIRED Mr. Boyd to help speed up protection in our park," said Rev. Williams.

Correction

In a story on Granite City High School graduates in last Wednesday's Journal, Class Salutatorian Pamela Robel's name was omitted from the list of students who scored 30 or above on the American College Test. Pamela, in fact, was one the top three in the class on the ACT.

Venice High will be painted soon

By VALERIE EVENDEN

A new, fresh look will be evident when Venice High School students return to class this fall.

A contract for an interior painting project, slated to cost $14,780 for labor and materials, was awarded to Keck Painting and Decorating Co., Granite City, at Thursday night's meeting of the Venice Board of Education.

The Keck firm was one of two companies bidding on the job, which includes removal of extensive scaling plaster, replastering the walls and painting the high school classrooms, corridors, hallways and restrooms.

The second bidder was a Collinsville firm, which submitted a bid of $13,800, lower than Keck's by $980.

The higher bid was accepted when it was determined the Keck firm would utilize three or four men on the job, rather than a single individual, as indicated by the second bidder.

The project will be completed in a short period of time by the Keck company, instead of taking all summer and possibly extending into the next school year if awarded to the other firm, it was reasoned by the board.

Bids also were submitted by the same companies to repaint a breezeway and hallway in the school's 1938 addition.

Superintendent of Schools Robert N. Vickers suggested redefining specifications on this painting project, due to a vast difference in the bids received.

A priority list of repair and maintenance projects occupied the school board members' attention during the session.

Vickers had prepared a list of objectives which were talked about in previous meetings and noted the number one priority was repainting the high school building.

"We need also to attach some priorities to the projects listed in the Illinois Life Safety Code survey report," the administrator said.

Receiving top priority in the survey was replacing steel fire doors in the breezeway. "We can get this done using some Life Safety funds," Vickers said.

The Venice School District reconstituted a five-cent tax levy per $100 assessed valuation for Life Safety purposes last year. It will produce $6,000 a year.

We have about $40,000 in the fund, so we can begin to do something on the projects using the existing money, but we can't complete all the work," Vickers said. The board agreed to replace the steel doors and complete other essential projects to the extent that funds are available.

Another priority would be repairs to the asphalt surface of the parking area and playground in which cracks are evident. "I think this must be done before winter," Vickers said.

Board President Wilbert Glasper brought to the board's attention the condition of pavement near the school entrance.

"It is a terrible shape right where the driveway and street join," he said.

Permission was given for Vickers to apply for an extension of time for the district's Life Safety work program, a routine practice followed in previous years.

When the Venice school buildings were resurveyed recently, it was estimated rehabilitation projects to comply with maximum code requirements would cost about $281,449.

The survey prioritized work into three classifications, with projects listed as urgent, recommended or not required but desirable.

Projects in the urgent category at the Venice Elementary School totaled $186,202, including asbestos reduction. Estimated cost of items in the second category was $15,930, and the third amounted to $673, for a total of $198,807.

Estimated cost of the high school building projects was $68,055 in the urgent category, $25,800 in the recommended level and $2,700 in the not-required category.

When the original survey was completed in 1966, the cost of proposed rehabilitation projects for certain sections of the work was about $160,000, Vickers said.

"We could think of a Life Safety bond issue," Vickers said, but added that a school consolidation bill is still under review in the state legislature. "I think there is a pretty good chance that maybe something will come out of it, but knowing Springfield, maybe nothing will be done. We don't want to put out the total amount of money and then have school consolidation," he added.

Other actions the school board approved, included:

— Retained the accounting firm of C.J. Schlosser and Co. to perform the district's annual audit on a bid of $3,900 (maximum fee).

— Offered three or four teacher wood desks to the public on a bid basis.

Consistent fees goal for GC park classes

By DAVE WHALEY
Staff writer

Consistency in fees for Granite City Park District programs will be studied by the park board's finance committee.

Board President George Sykes said Wednesday he saw a problem with having different fees for different programs, and also with the board's practice of charging fees for summer programs and not for winter programs.

"THE PROBLEM is the inconsistency," Sykes said. "So I would like to assign the finance committee chairman (Jeff Worthen) to come up with a consistent fee schedule."

Sykes said he was troubled by "charging $5 for baseball instruction and $4 for softball instruction, things like that."

Worthen agreed to study the matter, emphasizing he thought program fees were needed.

"I KNOW THE PARK is not strictly for recreational purposes," he said. "Many people just want to enjoy the beauty out there."

"But anyone knows we have done nothing for capital improvements here in a couple of years.

"I think a person should pay not the whole cost of something, but half the cost."

WORTHEN SAID slimmer programs are offered around town, and they are "about 15 times as expensive as what we offer."

Slimmer programs are offered in the park this summer for $1.50 for park district residents.

"I think we could position with a more reliable position with things," Sykes said. "I'm more worried about the kids than the adults."

The parents will go out and buy groceries before they will put their child into one of our programs at a little higher price."

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the board decided to pay a $10 fee for everyone living within the district who will take part in a summer program in the park sponsored by the Tri-City Area Association for the Retarded.

TCAAR is charging $5 for the program as well as an extra $5 for bus service because of cutbacks in funding of the United Way agency.

Director of Parks and Recreation Dave Nolan said he estimated about 60 people within the district would be taking part in the program, meaning a cost to the district of $600.

THE BOARD ALSO denied a request from the Leo's Club of Pontoon Beach to sponsor a performance of the Pizzen Bros. Circus on park grounds.

The Leo's Club had entered into a contract with the circus, operating out of Amherst Junction, Wis., but a review of the contract by Randall Robertson, attorney for the park district, resulted in his recommendation not to grant the request.

Robertson said the agreement was between the circus and the club, and the park district would have no right to enforce any terms or conditions.

"THE DISTRICT HAS no experience with a 'circus-type' event and, therefore, would have no prior knowledge of required security for animals brought to the circus, the type of personnel that will accompany the circus and the conditions under which the personnel will live at the campsite," Robertson said.

"The park has no track record on the nature and condition of the equipment that will be brought to the circus," Robertson said.

Robertson also said there was no insurance protection for the park district.

"THIS IS NO reflection on the Pontoon Beach club," Sykes said. "But I just can't see getting into this type of program."

The board also extended through June 23 the period for selling season passes to the Wilson Park swimming pool at a reduced rate.

FAMILY passes, normally $45, will be $40; adult passes, normally $25, will be $22.50; and child passes (through high school), normally $15, will be $12.50.

THE BOARD VOTED on raising prices for various concessions.

Ice cream will go from 30 cents to 35 cents; pre-packaged potato chips from 30 to 35 cents; 14-ounce sodas from 45 to 50 cents; gum from 25 to 30 cents; and nachos from $1 to $1.25.

A 24-ounce soda costing 70 cents will be added to the concession items.

Scott Air Force show set for June 22

SCOTT AIR FORCE BASE—One of the Air Force's most sophisticated aircraft—commonly known as the AWACS—will highlight the Air Show June 22 at Scott Air Force Base.

The E-3 Airborne Warning and Control System, with its unique radar dome perched atop of modified Boeing 707, will stand out easily amid the dozens of other aircraft slated to be on display.

Scott's Air Show, which is free to the public, begins at 9 a.m., with activities planned throughout the day.

The AWACS, making its first appearance at Scott, is a rare addition to any air show and is bound to be one of the highlights of the shows, according to a public affairs spokesman at Tinker AFB, OK, the AWACS' home station.

Nicknamed the "Sentry," the AWACS provides surveillance, command, control and communications—all while in the air. It detects and tracks fixed-wing aircraft at all altitudes against both land and sea backgrounds, and will direct friendly aircraft against enemy aircraft before they reach their ordnance release points.

While the AWACS will be a popular attraction on the ground, the Thunderbirds, the Air Force's aerial demonstration team, will undoubtedly have everyone's attention when they take to the sky at 3 p.m. for the final event of the day. The Thunderbird pilots will be flying red, white and blue F-16 Fighting Falcons, the aircraft they've used since 1983.

Additional aerial features will include an F-4 Phantom flyby at 10 a.m. and an F-15 Eagle flyby and landing at 11:50 a.m.

A team of Air Force combat controllers will demonstrate their parachuting skills when they perform a series of jumps climaxing with a 10,000-foot leap about five miles from the base. The two controllers making the final jump will be wired with a remote radio so they can talk to the crowd as they make their descent.

New to the Air Show will be an aeromedical evacuation demonstration combining air and ground operations.

A C-130 Hercules will perform a tactical landing on the Scott runway, simulating the conditions that might be present in a forward zone during wartime. Flight nurses and medical technicians will on-load simulated patients in the safest, fastest way possible. The C-130 will then perform a tactical take-off to conclude the demonstration.

Other attractions at the Air Show will include two security police working dog demonstrations at 9:35 a.m. and 1:50 p.m.; a 12:15 p.m. performance by the Air Force Band of Mid-America; a demonstration of radio controlled airplanes at 10:30 a.m.; and a drill performance by the Scott Honor Guard at 2 p.m.

1934 checkbook wins Madison bank award

By DONNA KIMBRO
of the Press-Record

Area residents who produced oldest documents, pictures or other memorabilia relating to the First National Bank in Madison were presented with gifts Thursday afternoon by Margaret Lee, vice president and public relations officer of the bank.

The promotion to find the oldest items was sponsored in conjunction with the grand opening celebration of new and expanded business places in Madison on June 7 and 8.

Lela (Signalgo) Kawula, 3232 Carlson Ave., submitted an old checking account book in the name of her parents, Louis and Jennie Signalgo. The first entry was dated July 30, 1934, just three days after the official opening of the bank. She received $50 for the oldest document.

Eleanor Taratjio, 65 Karen Drive, received a silver bank with 50 fifty-cent pieces for her entry. She presented a savings account book issued in the name of her parents, John and Anna Kraynak, dated Aug. 9, 1934.

A bank holding 50 quarters was presented to Mike and Mary Bero, 1820 Fourth St., Madison, who had a savings book in their name. This account was opened Jan. 10, 1931.

Many people participated in the treasure hunt for items of bank history. They submitted pictures, checks, loan papers, and correspondence which were exhibited on two lattice-style display boards in the bank lobby.

Summer Reader enriches children's reading abilities

Parents interested in enriching their children's reading skills over summer vacation now will be able to take advantage of Summer Reader. Developed by four elementary school teachers who are reading specialists, Summer Reader originated 10 years ago in the Champaign area and currently is being offered throughout the Midwest.

Summer Reader is an individualized four- or six-week summer reading, writing and activity program; this instruction is available through the mail to children pre-school through sixth grade. In addition to developing and maintaining reading skills, the program has been designed to help children learn to enjoy reading at home.

skill sheets are completed, the child sends them back to the Summer Reader teacher. Her personal comments, words of encouragement and congratulations are returned to the child, with the skill sheets, in a timely manner.

"This personal attention is not always possible in a busy classroom, but it is so important," added Peskin. "It ensures that each child is challenged to reach his or her reading potential and helps build self-confidence and a sense of achievement."

Beyond the book and skill sheets, there also is a calendar with instructions to help the child manage his or her time to complete the project, crafts and such age-appropriate activities as do-it-yourself stories, number games, puzzles and word games.

"Over the past 10 years, Summer Reader has been a success with children and parents alike, in large because it provides a good balance between focused, stimulating activity that stretches the imagination and the fun and freedom of an unstructured summer," said Maryann Peskin, founding partner.

"Each week we send a package addressed to the child enrolled in the program. The arrival of the mailman with personally addressed packages gets the children excited about participating in the program. Included in each package is a book — good literature carefully selected for the child's age and reading ability. Summer Reader is for gifted and average readers, as well as children with reading problems," she said.

All in all, Summer Reader provides more than six hours of reading and related activities each week.

While the packages are individualized for the child in the program, parents receive information sheets with self-help tips to ensure that they, as well as their children, get the most out of the program.

Parents can choose from three starting dates: June 17, June 24, or July 1. The cost for the four-week program is $55 plus $4.50 for postage and handling; the cost of the six-week program is $68 plus $6.75 postage and handling. Summer Reader can be mailed to the child's home or vacation/camp address.

In addition to the book, which is the child's to keep, there are skill sheets to help the child understand what he or she has read. Once the

Billeaud heads County Bar

Collinsville attorney William J. Billeaud has been elected president of the Madison County Bar Association to serve a one-year term beginning in June.

Billeaud has practiced law in Madison County for the past 12 years. He is a sole practitioner, with offices located at 304 W. Main St., Collinsville.

Billeaud succeeds William S. Beatty of Granite City, president of the 30-member group in 1984-85.

In assuming the office, Billeaud said one of his principal aims is to make the public more aware of services the legal profession provides to the public. "Too often, lawyers are depicted unfavorably and the many services they provide to the community are overlooked," he said.

nel and purchase orders."

John Lakin, recreation supervisor, will also be put in charge of concessions and security, and Andean Rains, maintenance supervisor, will have the garden area of the park added to his responsibilities.

Sykes said those employees will each have $75 a week added to their regular pay.

"The board is not in a hurry to name a new director, according to Sykes.

"But we have to keep in mind if we hire someone from outside the district, and they have kids, they will probably want to be moved in here before the start of school in September," he said.

Nolan, who is an engineer, said he got an offer from Washington University in late April.

"I turned them down at that time," he said. "And I really thought the whole thing was out the window. Then I got a second offer about two weeks ago. I guess they must have liked me enough to come back with a second offer, and I couldn't pass it up this time."

He said his duties will be much the same as those he has had at the park district since becoming director in January 1982. He formerly was an administrative aide in the Granite City municipal government.

If you're one of those rare people who have taken the trouble to look up periodic service recommendations in your car owner's manual, you may have seen double and triple asterisks referring to "severe service" operation.

The term does not necessarily denote someone who daily climbs Pike's Peak or asks his subcompact car to perform Herculean tasks.

In fact, says Car Care Council, the time-worn idea that the best buy in a used car is the one owned by the little old lady who drove only 3 miles to and from the grocery store is a thing of the past. She may qualify as a severe service driver and not even know it. Before buying her car, take a close look at her maintenance records!

Many of the driving habits that we think of as typical can be very hard on a car, especially in certain combinations. For example, short trips (10 miles or less) and stop-and-go driving, such as might be encountered in city traffic or on a delivery route, combined with unusually hot or cold weather, are hard on a car.

Towing a trailer or otherwise hauling heavy loads on a regular basis considered severe service, too, especially in hilly terrain.

While this kind of driving is the exception rather than the rule, people who do fall into these categories should be careful to observe owner's manual maintenance recommendations when they apply.

Especially important is constant checking of vital fluids, such as engine oil, transmission fluid, antifreeze/coolant, brake fluid and power steering fluid.

Failure to check and change fluids and filters on schedule can cause rapid engine and/or transmission wear and premature failure of these major components.

The council emphasizes the importance of recognizing evidence of possible automatic transmission damage due to the intense heat and stress that can result from something as commonplace as extended periods of trying to rock a car out of a snow drift.

When the transmission fluid has turned dirty brown and smells burned, do not delay changing fluid and filter. It could help avoid a major overhaul expense.

Car Care Council offers more information on checking fluids and filters in its brochure, "Keep an Eye on Your Filters." Send a quarter and a stamped, self-addressed #10 envelope to: Filters, Car Care Council, 600 Renaissance Center, Detroit, Mich. 48243.

Eagles Auxiliary attends convention

Granite City Eagles Auxiliary 1126 members attended the 37th annual Eagles Illinois State Auxiliaries convention June 6-9 at the Holiday Inn, Marion, hosted by the Herrin Auxiliary.

Those attending were Vincine Zertan, 1985-86 Granite City Auxiliary president; Carol Hill, junior past president; and Angie Bushler, Florence Hagnauer, Helen Lipchik, Ann Koropka, Yvonne Gray, Kathy Barnhart, JoAnn Aubuchon and Mickey Patton. Local Aerie members attending were Harold Love, Bill Barnhart and Larry Patton.

A total of $77,500 was raised for state charities by the auxiliaries in the past year to aid Heart, Diabetes, Cancer, Kidney, Jimmy Durante Crippled Children, Gold Eagle, Disaster, Eagle Educational, and State Project for Prevention of Blindness drive.

In state competition, District 7 ritual teams were first in drill work and also were voted the outstanding team of all teams competing in various drills.

The local escort team finished second in drill competition, and the Granite City Auxiliary publicity book, assembled by Publicity Chairman Helen Lipchik, was awarded first place.

Of the more than 225 balloons sent up by Sacred Heart-St. Joseph School in February, six of them got responses from people as far away as Columbus, Ohio.

As part of Catholic Schools' Week, students at the school launched helium-filled balloons with messages and requests to answer them.

Four responses came from Indiana and two from Ohio.

Patty Weisbach got a response from the White family in Indianapolis. Joey Falbe got a letter from Douglas Dubis, a student at Indiana State University in Terre Haute. Dubis said he was on a field trip Feb. 24 when he found Joey's balloon in a cornfield eight miles northeast of Terre Haute.

Another balloon was found by the grandfather of a third grade student in West Newton, Ind., a suburb of Indianapolis. The entire class sent a greeting back to Granite City.

Karen Boyer of Martinsville, Ind., said she found a note in her husband's parents' backyard "still wrapped in plastic tied to what was left of a pink balloon."

Brandon Bowser of Arcanum, Ohio, close to Dayton, said he found one of the balloons in the woods while snowmobiling Feb. 10. But the winner belonged to Chris Mance of Sacred Heart. His balloon was found by Carl Wright on his farm in Concessville, Ohio, 80 miles east of Columbus, or more than 550 miles from Granite City.

Bridge

FIELDS TRIED to contact the bridge engineer Friday to ensure the problem had been resolved and would not repeat itself, thereby creating the same driving conditions Monday morning.

In another report at last week's council session, Mayor Tyrone Echols announced the city will receive a senior citizen van from the Madison County Transit District by June 24.

"It has been a long wait, but we are going to get it," the mayor said. SUCH A VEHICLE has long been sought by Echols for the community, which never has had any special form of transportation for its senior residents, unlike many surrounding towns and township areas.

The mayor reminded council members to check property in their wards and note law or code infractions. He asked the aldermen to prepare their lists so the building and health inspectors can begin processing the complaints.

Fourth Ward Alderman Victor Valentine Sr. has asked if st 1 department crews could "pay a little more attention to weeds growing up in alleys."

"We can take care of that," the mayor replied.

ABOUT EIGHT or 10 youths are now employed as part of the summer work program, Echols said in answer to an inquiry from 4th Ward Alderman Charles Haynes.

The aldermen authorized Mayor Echols to execute a letter of understanding with the Illinois Department of Transportation for certification to the Federal Highway Administration.

The document states the city will acquire all rights-of-way for any federally funded street or highway projects prior to advertising for bids on any such projects.

Spillers

(Continued from page one) position and I am sorry the post no longer exists because we did many good things for older people who were veterans and for the children."

Friday was his last day at the school and he said he expects to meet with Superintendent of Schools John Patchett and other administrators in the coming week to become acquainted with his new duties.

Mom loved even though she's a 'shopaholic'

BY CAROL KENNER

For the Journal

There are probably few subjects in America (or anywhere else, for that matter) that evoke more emotion than the topic of mothers. It goes without saying that, no matter what you think of your boss, we all have a mother somewhere, and chances are good that we feel strongly enough about her to register an opinion, be it positive or negative, on Motherhood.

Some of us, unfortunately, feel ambiguous about the matter. Because the mother that we love so dearly is at the same time the possessor of qualities that bring out the Lizzie Borden in us.

I know that I will never be able to go home again, but having said this much I must continue: my mother is a Shopaholic. God knows, all five of us love her dearly, but there is something in the sight of her with a K-Mart flyer in her hand that can send the flesh of us into hiding. My nephew once did penance for a week for directing Grandma's attention to an ad for candied popcorn, thereby leading to a shopping spree that (a) left his father with fourteen pairs of socks with Howard Cosell emblazoned on the side, (b) cost the annual inurance payment and (c) sent his mother into early labor. It isn't that Mother doesn't mean well; God knows, she does her best for us. Unfortunately, she responds to a blue light like a wino to a paper bag. I know she considers me an ungrateful child, but I find it hard to be angry about being the recipient of the last Nehru jacket purchased in North America (and for only $2.57!).

Her relationship with certain other family members has likewise dimmed, thanks to her favorite pastime. Last summer she discovered a marvelous lingerie sale, where she purchased a gorgeous, pale blue, key-hole-front gown — for my seventy-six year old grandmother. The lovely, diaphanous garment was cut to her navel (or, at least where her navel used to be). Grandma, a woman of patience and fortitude when it comes to Mother's gifts, was moved to respond with "Mavis, have you lost your mind?" Mother was very disappointed. It is, after all, very difficult to find such nifty little items in a size 46. I am not sure when and where she thought Grandma was going to wear it, since we lost Grandma sixteen years ago. If we hadn't I feel sure he would have gone voluntarily at the prospect of Grandma in that gown.

Actually, I think Mother may have been trying to outfit Grandma for her rather frequent trips to the hospital, where Grandma often goes for a break from the soaps. I hope not. That's to think of Grandma clubbing some poor young intern senseless with her cane when he is driven to unbridled lust by The Gown.

Unfortunately, there are other victims of Mother's generosity. Her attempted kindness spans the generations to infect itself on her grandchildren as well. My little darlings are certainly the only ones in the neighborhood to sport matching suede jackets, complete with 1960s fringe. Well, maybe they don't really sport them; they just sort of hang them in their closets as near the back wall as possible, taking them out to drape over the coat tree when Grandma visits. Sometimes they try to be nice by saying things like, "Hey, Grandma! Barry says my coat is really different!" Encouraged, she rushes back to the store and buys me a pair of brightly colored knee pants, which make my rear end look like the "Before" to Victoria Principal's "After." Actually, I'm being kind to myself; I don't think I'd mind looking like the VP's before!

You have to understand that Mother's zest for shopping is not a shortcoming on her part. I have no doubt that her intentions in the matter are the best. It is simply a matter of perspective. In her opinion, my youngest brother, a portly Charlie Daniels type, would certainly be better dressed if he possessed several pairs of paisley boxer shorts. No doubt she has never considered the impact upon his reputation at Harry's Bar, where he regularly arrives for the weekly pool tournament upon his aged Harley, should such a garment peek from his waistband. A pool tournament in West Granite is not the place to wear paisley underwear, unless you have a very fast Harley indeed.

Desperate, my siblings and I recently held a summit meeting on the matter. It was decided that we must help Mother find New Interests. Since my brother with the Howard Cosell socks is an auction buff, he decided to introduce Mother to the joys of bidding. Big mistake. Fortunately, it is his mistake, and I don't have to worry about where to hang thirteen reproductions of George Washington's profile and six of Mick Jagger's tongue. I certainly hope he doesn't draw my name at Christmas time for a long, long time.

Next we tried bingo, but had to leave abruptly when we discovered Mother purchasing cupcakes and brownies at a wholesale level from the refreshment stand. Her explanation was that we might need a bedtime snack. I can understand that. Frequently I do indulge myself needlessly at bedtime. I cannot, however, recall ever having consumed 18 brownies and 24 cupcakes to tide me over.

Currently we are trying to add new dimensions to her life by purchasing an "Eligible" ad for her. This is being done anonymously for a couple of very good reasons, the first being that we prefer not being disinherited. The second is that, if she knew she would certainly insist upon writing the ad herself, and none of us want to find Mother under the caption, "Special: This Week Only!"

Man threatens woman and her dog with knife

A man who wielded a knife and threatened to harm a woman and her dog was being held for investigation during the weekend by Granite City police.

The victim, a resident of the 2700 block of Washington Avenue, escaped from the dwelling where a former friend allegedly confronted her with a kitchen knife and made threats at 4:15 a.m. Saturday. She went to a nearby restaurant and called police.

Arriving at the house, officers entered an enclosed front porch and were able to see the man seated on a couch with the victim's dog. He answered a knock on the door and surrendered without incident. A serrated knife was laying on the coffee table.

The victim was asleep on a pallet on the living room floor when awakened by a crashing sound of dishes falling in the kitchen, she told police.

Seeing the man standing at the kitchen sink, she asked what he was doing there. It was then he picked up a knife and began threatening her dog, she said.

He demanded the woman remove her clothing and when she refused and began to scream, he flourished the knife in front of her and again threatened her life, she said.

The woman tried to talk to him, but the menacing remarks continued; he ordered her into a bedroom where he made her sit in the dark and told her she had until 5 o'clock to comply with his demands or he would harm her and her dog, she alleged.

At that point, the man went into the living room and began to watch television. He then asked the victim to fix him a soft drink in a glass with ice, she said. After complying, she sat with the man on the couch, trying to persuade him to leave.

The woman then managed to reach the door and ran outside, getting into her auto which was parked in the driveway. She locked the car doors. But when she started the engine to leave, the man, who had followed her outside, allegedly punctured the right rear tire with the kitchen knife. She still was able to drive away to the restaurant to call police, she said.

BAC board agrees to buy North High School

The Belleville Area College board has agreed to buy Granite City High School North.

At a special meeting June 15, BAC trustees unanimously accepted sale terms authorized June 13 by the Granite City Board of Education.

A cash payment of $500,000 is to be made, plus $50,000 a year for the next 10 years for a total of $1 million. Tuition waivers will be granted in an amount up to $15,000 a year in each of the next 10 years, and BAC will spend up to $250,000 to provide an automotive shop which can be used free of charge by the Granite City school district for the next five years.

BAC will acquire 38 acres and the former high school building it has leased for the past two years. Granite City District Nine will retain 30 acres at the Maryville and Nantuxi roads site.

The college plans major building renovations at its Granite City center, which has been proposed for full campus status within the BAC system. The three principal instructional locations in the system are Belleville, Granite City and Red Bud.

The multi-county college district provides two years of higher education as part of the state's community college network.

Price bust dedicated

With the Air Force Band of Mid-America providing a musical salute, a bust of Congressman Melvin Price was dedicated June 15.

Sculpted by Freda Brilliant of Carbondale, the two-ton bronze bust was unveiled at the St. Clair County Building in downtown Belleville.

Among those present was the honoree, now in his 31st two-year term in Congress, who thanked all involved in the tribute.

More than 250 attended and presiding was Jerry Costello, St. Clair County Board chairman who briefly was a candidate for the Congressional seat prior to the March 1984 primary election.

Costello said, "There is no other public official in Illinois more deserving of recognition than Congressman Price. He's been loyal to his party, to his district and to the people."

JAMACIA DAVIS, a preschooler who was enrolled in the child care program at VLTC while her mother attended classes, receives her certificate from Wilbert Glasper, right, and Kirk Gardner, both of the Venice Board of Education. Five preschool-age youngsters earned similar "diplomas."

Venice-Lincoln Tech honors 152

Nearly 300 attended a ceremony honoring 152 adults who graduated from various study courses at the Venice-Lincoln Technical Center in Venice.

By far the largest number of graduates were the 104 adult students receiving their high school-level General Educational Development certificates.

Among the other graduates, 29 achieved certificates in business education, 12 in the nurse assistant program, four in the machine shop course and three in the welding program.

Each of the graduates received his or her certificate from Wilbert Glasper, president of the Venice Board of Education. Glasper was assisted by Kirk Gardner, also a member of the school board.

Addressing the gathering of graduates, family members and friends was Nancy McIlroy of the Illinois State Board of Education.

The guest speaker is the contract administrator for the Illinois Department of Adult Vocational and Technical Education.

Fourteen adult students also attained perfect attendance awards and were presented additional certificates.

Venice-Lincoln Technical Center, an adult vocational-education school, is administered by the Venice School District. Programs there are financed with federal and state funding grants.

For the first time in its 10-year history, the center is sponsoring a summer school program this year.

Peter Ponce, VLTC director, said the final orientation day for new students will take place this week. Only adults who are public aid recipients are eligible to enroll in the summer session, he said.

Eighty-nine students are registered so far in the summer program, which starts this week, Ponce told Venice School Board members at their June 13 meeting. The final enrollment figure is expected to exceed 100, he added.

Additionally, 99 youngsters whose parents will be attending summer classes are registered in the VLTC child care program this summer.

Three aides have been hired to care for the children during school hours.

Illinois lawmakers getting little mail on tax plan

WASHINGTON — For an issue that could affect most of the nation's taxpayers, President Reagan's tax-simplification plan has spurred comparatively little mail to Illinois lawmakers.

Although the mail is generally supportive, the volume is not what the lawmakers anticipated.

With the exception of Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, the Chicago Democrat who is chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, Illinois members of Congress are getting surprisingly few letters or telephone calls on the tax proposal.

Rostenkowski, who delivered the Democratic response on national television to Mr. Reagan's tax-reform speech, invited a deluge. He concluded his speech by urging voters to write to "R-O-S-T-E-N-K-O-W-S-K-I" with their comments on the tax plan. In the week since the speech, about 2,500 to 3,000 people took him up on the invitation, according to Jim Jaffe, an aide to the congressman.

Since that mail is coming from across a nation in which more than 100 million tax returns are filed, the volume may not seem staggering. But Jaffe said it was a "whole new experience" for Rostenkowski, who he noted, "is not a television star" and normally "works as an inside politician."

"We are getting a lot of mail for us, and he is feeling good about it," Jaffe said.

Other lawmakers, however, report that few taxpayers have been sufficiently excited about the proposal to have called or written.

Rep. Philip Crane of Mount Prospect, the only Illinois Republican on the Ways and Means Committee, received about 100 letters in support of the plan and about 25 against, a response characterized as "low" by a Crane aide.

"But then, we did not say write C-R-A-N-E or write P-H-I-L-I," the aide added.

Lawmakers clearly were expecting more of a response than they got.

Rep. John Groberg, R-St. Charles, supplemented the staff of his three district offices with volunteers to answer the telephones that he expected to be ringing off the hooks the day after the president's speech. The calls did not come. By noon, the volunteers were sent home, according to a Groberg aide. In the week that followed, Groberg got about 100 calls or letters, a "very low" response, the aide said.

House Republican Leader Bob Michel, R-Peoria, got about a dozen telephone calls at his Peoria office and has received three letters for and three letters against the plan, according to Mike Johnson, Michel's chief of staff and press secretary.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., got about 200 letters in the first week after Mr. Reagan outlined the plan.

"That is not extraordinary in any way for an issue of this size," said Wade Nelson, Dixon's press secretary.

Nelson noted that Dixon routinely receives about 10,000 letters a week on a variety of issues. "A hit of 200 with a normal week's load of 10,000 is not much of a bump," Nelson said.

Nelson estimated that Dixon might have received 1,000 letters on the tax plan if Mr. Reagan had asked voters to write to their lawmakers.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., also received about 200 letters, an amount far below the expectation of Illinois staffers.

"We were braced for a large volume, and it just was not there," said David Carle, Simon's press secretary.

Carle noted that Simon received about 5,000 letters in the wake of the president's televised appeal for support of the compromise on budget targets then pending in the Senate, a non-binding resolution that ultimately passed without a vote to spare.

Congressional staffers offer a variety of explanations for why an issue that affects so many people is generating so little mail. The prevailing theory is that the "simplification" is still confusing.

It is a big bite to try to digest. The administration put out a 481-page book to explain it. Despite the plethora of news coverage, many taxpayers have not figured out whether they, as individuals, would be better or worse off with a new plan that they would with the more familiar, if unpopular, existing methods, staffers suggested.

Many taxpayers undoubtedly are waiting to see what changes Congress attempts to make in the plan, and the mail could pick up as the lawmakers and special-interest groups focus on specific elements in the far-reaching proposal.

Another possibility is that taxpayers like the general idea of "tax reform." It is a fact of life on Capitol Hill that few people write their lawmakers to applaud an idea. Most of the mail is from individuals or groups who are opposed to a specific idea or bill.

The relatively few taxpayers who have written so far have been overwhelmingly in support of the Reagan plan. The Rostenkowski aide, for example, estimated 90 percent of the mail was generally supportive.

He said a common concern expressed in the mail was that the lawmakers should "stick to their guns and don't let the special interests lead you down."

Of course, for the letter writers, the "special interest" is the other guy.

Many of the people who wrote to the Illinois lawmakers in support of the Reagan plan added a few "buts." The element in the Reagan plan that has sparked the most opposition among the letter writers is the proposal to end the federal income tax deduction for state and local taxes. Also drawing fire, even from supporters of the plan, are the proposals to tax employer-paid health insurance premiums and to limit mortgage interest deductions on second homes.

Businesses, of course, also have their concerns about the plan which, while not as repugnant to the corporate world as the original plan proposed by the Treasury Department, still is causing unease in the board rooms.

Caterpillar Tractor Co., a major employer in Illinois, is in the process of analyzing a plan and hopes to be able to support it if some modifications are made, according to a company spokesman here. But he said some of the changes, specifically revisions in foreign tax credits, could make it even more difficult for the company to compete with foreign suppliers.

And that reflects the congressional dilemma. Nobody is saying the whole plan is a bust, but seemingly everybody has a change in mind.

Groundwater network proposed

SPRINGFIELD — A three-level program to test underground water in Illinois, expected to cost $690,000 a year when operational, has been unveiled by two state agencies.

Officials of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Energy and Natural Resources say the program will provide comprehensive information about water quality in some 1,700 communities that rely on underground aquifers.

Nearly half the state's residential population draws from the underground sources, which provide more than a billion gallons of water daily for residential, commercial and agricultural use.

The planned monitoring network was developed by ENR and IEPA based on a one-year, $82,000 study done by the State Water Survey, a division of ENR.

Currently, IEPA monitors 3,400 public water supply wells for 22 water quality indicators. Under

Crop has potential to be a bin-buster

By Charlyn Fargo
Copley News Service

SPRINGFIELD — This year has the potential for a bin-buster crop, thanks to early planting and timely rains.

In Illinois, corn planting is 98 percent complete and soybean planting 88 percent complete.

The Illinois Crop Reporting Service says the average height of corn is 11 inches, compared to 6 inches at the same time last year and an average of 9 inches. More than 70 percent of both the corn and soybean crops are estimated as good.

Agrohomist Don Johnson of the Arcadian Corp. says farmers who haven't gotten as much rain as they want shouldn't be concerned.

He quotes Iowa State University specialist Harvey Thompson: "The best corn crops come when early June is dry. It relates to the deep rooting that occurs, preparing the plant for a drier July and August."

Johnson was in Springfield recently troubleshooting crop problems. Cutworm damage, he said, has been widespread.

"It caught us off guard," he said. "It may have been because we've planted late the last few years. By the time the crop was planted, the cutworms had completed their cycle. This year, the early planting and cool weather prolonged their life cycle."

He urged farmers to scout their fields to prevent the same surprise from rootworms.

TAX PLANS — Ron Bailey, director of the Illinois Farm Development Authority, says President Reagan's income tax proposal would wipe out his office by the end of 1985.

The IFDA offers low-interest loans to farmers and agribusinesses through tax-exempt municipal bonds.

"Everyone wants tax simplification," Bailey said. "But when you consider the price that must be paid, I'm not sure it's something everyone wants."

Bailey said rural areas and farmers might stand to lose the most from elimination of tax-free bonds.

"Otherwise, where is the incentive for small businesses to come to rural Illinois?" he asked. "The only thing they've got is industrial revenue bonds."

Bailey said such bonds have been targeted by the administration and several members of Congress because they cost the government money.

"But they don't weight the gain from new jobs," Bailey said. He has been testifying before several committees in Washington, but says the battle will be difficult. "The president has a lot of momentum."

He's convinced the tax proposal ultimately will damage agriculture.

The American Farm Bureau Federation says it still is studying the proposal. "Farmers and ranchers would welcome a simplified system and the fact the plan is not a disguised tax increase," says Robert Delano, AFBF president. But he wants to make sure agriculture is treated fairly.

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture

John Block contends that most farmers would pay less because lower rates and increased exemptions would offset deductions that no longer would be available.

Officials of the Illinois Farm Bureau are concerned about elimination of deductions for state and local taxes, elimination of the investment tax credit, elimination of deductions for soil and water conservation improvements and land clearing, and depreciation changes.

AG LIEN — A proposed state law that would have given ag suppliers the same financial protection as banks when farmers fall into debt has been held in committee. But farm suppliers are willing to wait a year to bring it up again.

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Jerome Joyce, D-Redick, meanwhile has said he plans several hearings this summer on the bill to encourage dialogue among financial institutions, growers and ag suppliers.

"The hearing process will let us pinpoint whether there is a problem in general or just in isolated areas," said Dwight Dunbar, vice president of the Illinois Fertilizer and Chemical Association.

Boat registration almost complete; over 10,000 in Madison County

SPRINGFIELD — Legislative attempts to limit boating while intoxicated don't seem to be scaring Illinois boaters into leaving the runabout at the dock.

Though bills that would mandate stiff fines for operating a boat while under the influence, similar to anti-drunk driving laws, are waiting legislative committee action, boat owners are moving ahead on schedule to re-register their crafts.

Gray Pierson, chief of boating registration for the state Conservation Department, said that to date, nearly 94,000 of the 135,000 boat license renewals mailed in January have been returned. That puts re-registrations about on target, he said, since about 80 percent of the boats that come up for renewal each year actually are re-registered, and the 94,000 figure means about 85 percent of those who will re-register have already done so.

In Illinois, any boat with a motor and any sailboat over 12 feet must carry the $4, two-year license — which actually is a decal displayed on the boat's bow. Canoes are exempt, as are any vessels documented with the U.S. Coast Guard. That registration is by weight and usually means boats 25 feet and over, Pierson said. The larger boats are chiefly based on Lake Michigan, though some also cruise the rivers at the state's boundaries, or operate in the Quad Cities area.

For 1984, there were 276,242 boats registered in the state. The registrations are staggered so that about half come up for renewal each year.

There is an additional $7 charge for a change in registration, and a $9 charge when a new boat is purchased, but except for those costs, the $4 license is complete with lids!

like Springfield also require a separate boating sticker to operate on their privately-owned lakes. Cook County accounts for the biggest single chunk of registrations — 52,741. Other northeastern Illinois county registrations include DuPage, 13,104; Lake, 13,531; McHenry, 6,419; Kane, 5,458, and Will, 8,148.

In southern Illinois, Madison County has 10,135 boats registered. St. Clair has 8,897 and Williamson has 3,945. Crawford County has 836.

Water

the monitoring program, IEPA will collect and analyze samples from high-, medium- and low-level priority wells and, with the Water Survey, will evaluate the data. If no additional investigation is necessary, the SWS will retain the data to match against future studies to determine significant changes.

If further study is needed, the two agencies will work together to design site-specific studies, and will collect and jointly evaluate additional samples, with IEPA having the responsibility for analyzing samples and taking remedial corrective action.

Don Etchison, ENR director, said the state has 8,300 square miles of shallow aquifers "highly susceptible to contamination," which will be monitored under the plan.

Richard Carlson, IEPA director, called the system "the first step toward creating quality standards for groundwater, as has been done for surface water."

As needed, the two agencies also plan to call upon other agencies including the state Public Health Department, the Bureau of Waterways in the Department of Transportation, the state and federal geologic surveys and others for participation.

Sample collection already has been started by IEPA. The network will draw from 204 high-priority wells tapping aquifers rated as highly susceptible to contamination, 427 medium-priority wells in aquifers considered less susceptible to contamination, and 331 low-priority wells outside the boundaries of the principal aquifers.

According to the USEPA, man-made chemicals are being detected in nearly one-third of the large drinking water supply systems in the United States, and more than 4,000 private and public wells have been affected by contamination. The contaminated wells usually are abandoned because of the excessive cost and technical difficulty of cleaning a polluted aquifer.

Nationally, over 200 different chemical substances have been detected in groundwater, the SWS study shows, including organic industrial solvents, pesticides, nitrates, heavy metals and petroleum products.

STUDY OR NO STUDY... NEXT TIME WE HAVE THESE ANIMALS HOUSE BROKEN.

Them against me in tax cut fight

A bunch of us Washington sophisticates were lurking around a bar the other day when President Reagan, who was barnstorming the country selling his tax reform, came on the air.

"Hey," said Beaver, "there's Ronnie, the people's lobbyist." The President had the crowd in his hands when he attacked the "special interests," "bureaucrats" and "so-called experts" who had "forgotten about the America that exists beyond the Potomac." Mr. Reagan got everyone riled up because he told them Washington didn't care about them. His message was that it was just the voters and him against "the government."

Capehart said, "Boy, he sure looks mad." Beaver laughed. "He isn't mad. He's putting on an act. There's nothing that plays better in Peoria than a President of the United States who hates Washington."

Capehart said, "But he is Washington. All those buildings out there are filled with Reagan bureaucrats. His people have been here for five years. Why does he make it sound as if he doesn't know who is running the country?"

Beaver said, "Because he just struck a political gold mine. Everyone is against 'special interests,' 'bureaucrats' and the 'so-called experts.' What better way to sell a tax reform program than to set up all the straw men in Washington who are against it?" Dumbarton said, "I haven't met anyone who is against tax reform. I've met people who are against parts of it. But hell, most of them are Reagan's best friends. The housing industry, the oil lobby and the fat cats have been his biggest supporters. I don't think the President has ever addressed a lunch or dinner for less than $1,000 a plate. If special interests didn't buy those tables I'll eat all the food left on their plates."

I said, "Knowing the President as well as I do I'm sure he is just resorting to Pat Buchanan's rhetoric. When Mr. Reagan attacks Washington he really means the Democrats in Washington who are interfering with his programs. And when Mr. Reagan says he wants the government to get off the people's back, he really means he wants Tip O'Neill to get off his back. The President's strategy is to turn the American people against their elected officials. Being the guy on the white horse is the role he plays the best."

"Well said," Beaver told me. "We must always keep in mind that those special interests he's flailing are the ones he and Nancy keep inviting over to the White House for dinner. And those tax reform stonewallers that he holds up to ridicule are the very corporation types that keep meeting in the President's kitchen. The biggest mistake we could make is to take seriously anything Ronald Reagan says on the road."

Dumbarton said, "It makes Ronnie happy to pretend he has nothing to do with what goes on here. And I'm one of those who believes that anything that makes Ronald Reagan happy is good for America."

Capehart was still the dissenter. "I have an exception. By demagoguing against this town he takes no responsibility for the fact his Administration is the 'Washington' he is attacking. They're his 'so-called experts' that are running the country."

I could see Capehart didn't get the big picture, so I tried to explain it to him.

"The President has discovered you get no ovals from the American people when you defend their government. But he knows he can set them on fire by making them think everyone in Washington is a crook. When Reagan raves and rants about the 'special interests' he's just invoking his 'make my day' syndrome."

Capehart wasn't convinced. "There's something wrong with all this. Why doesn't he level with Americans and tell them how much it really costs to run the country?"

Dumbarton said, "If you had a $200 billion deficit and your Defense Department was paying $600 for an ashtray, you would only talk about tax reform too."

Money is trash in the millions

"I should put out $5 for a hard seat in a ballpark so a bunch of millionaires can play ball? No way."

I was at first startled to hear that statement the other day. Then it set me to thinking... Americans used to sue Americans only rarely and only for "compensatory damages." Today's judgments frequently include multimillion-dollar punitive penalties.

What with widely publicized Vegas jackpots and purposely promoted state lotteries, "what's a million dollars anymore?"

Scores of top corporate executives are now paid more than a million dollars a year.

We media people, ourselves ridiculously overpaid, hover like moths around the flame.

A million — two million — for a single station anchorman — makes money sound like trash.

The Chief Justice of the United States makes $104,700 a year.

Tennis player Martina Navratilova collects more than $4 million a year.

That degree of inequity cannot long prevail if only because one of the irrefutable lessons of history is that "excesses, ultimately, inevitable, are their own undoing."

If the "star system" is to prevail in sports, arts and industry it needs to be explained that most of the enormous incomes go to people who are able to generate commensurate cash flow.

Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca

Good day

by Paul Harvey

ca harvested an income last year of $1,194,838 in salary — plus stock-option gains of $4.3 million.

But that prize was his reward for bringing Chrysler back from bankruptcy.

When performance and compensation are kept in perspective, there is less likelihood of alienating the public.

The alternative is not a happy one.

That one baseball fan's resentment alerted me, reminded me that fat-cats are prime targets for bitterness, resentment and reaction.

The confrontation is minimal right now because stockholders are too comfortable to object to sky-high executive salaries.

Consumers, themselves prosperous, rarely relate overhead to overpricing.

But when the lean times come...

We've not seen the incomes of a select few soar to such astronomically disproportionate heights since the robber barons of the 1920s.

Then, you'll remember, reaction spawned punitive legislation, tax discrimination and labor union organization of, by and for those who felt left out.

Fears impact of proposed tax

The Treasury Department's tax reform proposal, which would tax some employee health benefits, could, if adopted, push the country into establishing national health insurance, according to Jacob B. Underhill, president of New York Life Insurance Co.

Underhill said during an interview that the nation's insurance firms are worried about the effects of the Treasury's proposal on their industry. Treasury officials claim the recommended reforms would simplify the country's complex tax system.

"It is anything but simplification," said Underhill, who heads the nation's fifth-largest insurance company with assets of $28 billion. "Really, it has not been thought through carefully."

The plan recommends that some employee benefits, including health insurance, which generally are not now taxed, be taxed above a set limit. In the case of the health insurance, employees would be subject to tax on group health premiums paid by employers of more than $70 a month for single employees and $175 a month for families.

If enacted, such a change would most likely affect white-collar workers in higher income brackets, according to Underhill. However, he said, it would set a precedent that could eventually affect a much greater number of Americans. "I don't think employers or employees are aware of the effects of these changes," Underhill said.

Employee unions are concerned, he said, that if a tax cap is placed on benefits, employers will reduce the benefits, saying: "I'll give you the minimum, I won't give you any more."

Such a reaction, Underhill said, could weaken the nation's health insurance program and edge the nation into adopting national health insurance. Underhill, who believes the British national health insurance program is a failure, said such a program is not desirable for the United States.

Also of concern to the insurance industry is the tax plan's recommendation that whole life insurance premiums be taxed over a certain level as imputed income, Underhill said. He compared the proposal to counting a person's equity built up in his home as income before he has sold it.

These recommendations are receiving serious consideration in Congress, Underhill said. For that reason, he said, "the industry as a whole is gearing up a letter-writing campaign (to Congress). We've been stuffing our premium notices with information about this.

Tax reform is one of a number of regulatory areas receiving increasing attention from the insurance industry. Underhill said the industry is carefully monitoring bank deregulation proposals that would allow banks to sell insurance.

New York Life has a force of 10,000 full-time agents seeking to cater to the needs of each client, Underhill said.

"You've got to do it on a one-on-one basis," he said. "That's what we've made our reputation doing."

Money in junk bonds

Junk bonds are looking more enticing these days — but not just to speculators. Honest-to-goodness investors are taking a look.

Of course, these investors aren't going to look at one junk bond, or two or three. That's gambling. But they are willing to look at a portfolio full of junk bonds, or bonds selling at low ratings, such as CCC, CC, C and D.

If you have a diversified list of low-rated bonds, you can survive a default or two. Indeed, if the return on the surviving bonds is very high, you can make up the difference — and then some.

Recently, professors at the prestigious Wharton School concluded that, over a long period of time, a portfolio of high-income, low-quality bonds may be less risky than other portfolios. High returns and low risk — that's nirvana in the investment world.

Boston's Keystone Custodian group of funds has its B-4 bond fund, euphemistically called a "discount" bond fund, that concentrates on junk bonds, explained Albert H. Eifner III, president of Keystone Custodian Funds, in an interview.

State can manage its own waste, officials say

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois should be able to manage its low-level radioactive waste during an interim period between 1986 and about 1992, by which time a new disposal facility will be developed, nuclear safety officials say.

The state is obligated to build the LLW disposal site under a compact with Kentucky that now is pending congressional approval. Under the two-state pact, Illinois will be able to exclude wastes from all other states but will be taking an additional 2,000-3,000 cubic feet of LLW from Kentucky each year.

Central Midwest Compact Commission for LLW Management and Illinois Department of Nuclear Safety officials still are a long way from sifting the new LLW disposal facility. Meanwhile, the commission is holding public hearings across the state for an interim disposal plan.

Such a plan is crucial since curtailing power generation, medical research and other activities that produce LLW would have devastating effects on Illinois jobs and revenues, according to a 1984 report from the now defunct Illinois Atomic Energy Commission.

According to John Cooper of IDNS, utility companies will not meet great disposal difficulties in the interim since they have capital to build temporary storage facilities, which they now are doing. Smaller LLW generators, however, such as universities and hospitals, may have to cut back on their LLW volume, Cooper said.

Commonwealth Edison announced in December that it would build four LLW facilities in Dresden, LaSalle, Quad Cities and Zion, at a cost of about $14 million, to contain its LLW until a new state site is developed. The Chicago-based utility company produces 90 percent of the state's LLW.

The 1980 LLW Policy Act, under which Illinois and Kentucky came together last year, gives states responsibility for LLW disposal. It provides that any state in a regional compact may exclude wastes from non-compact states.

Mexican food will fill house

When it's Mexican food you're after, you usually don't turn to a third-generation Swede named Johnson to get it. You get your recipe from a Garcia or a Torres, or you dine at a place called Jose's or La Fiesta.

But when you're invited to dinner at any place, you're probably going to eat Mexican cuisine. Be forewarned: These dishes are not authentic by the classic definition of the Mexican-American cook. But they'll hold you in good stead if you're planning a party feast, a weekend dinner extravaganza or just a good midweek meal.

The guest list determines my approach to a dinner. If the invitation includes some new faces whose tastes are a mystery, or children, who usually disdain hot food, I keep the dishes basic (tacos, enchiladas and rice).

If it's my poker gang that's coming by, I almost double the chili input (not to mention the quantity per person).

My current personal favorite dish is chiles rellenos, a crisp-fried form of omelette topped with salsa. Stuffed with plenty of Monterey Jack cheese, they are at home as an entree or as a side dish.

If you're looking for something different, try the Carne Caliente over rice. Boiling the meat with hot chilies and their seeds provides a rousing dish for the heartier Mexican-food lovers, and it's very filling. Go easy on the side dishes when you serve it: It's almost a meal in itself.

Remember, stick to fresh meats and vegetables, and keep experimenting with the chilies to meet the tastes of your eating audience.

CHILI RELLENOS

Whole green (Anasheim) chilies, 1 for each relleno
Monterey Jack cheese cut in 8-inch-long logs
Salsa
1 dozen eggs
Salt and pepper
Oil for frying

Fresh chilies are best, but they must be peeled. Canned chilies are handy, but the lack of freshness costs. A good rule of thumb is to use fresh chilies for a small dinner and the canned, whole green chilies for a larger crowd.

The best way to peel a fresh chili is to hold it over an open burner flame with a fork, turning it as the skin burns and pops. After all the skin has been roasted, place the chili on a working surface and remove the skin. Keep the chili as intact as possible. Remove the stem and the white pulp inside the top of the chili. The seeds are optional (I prefer to leave them in).

Stuff each chili with Monterey Jack cheese and set aside. Begin warming about 1 pint of salsa for each half dozen rellenos you plan to cook.

Separate two eggs and whip the white first, adding a little salt and pepper. Add yolks and blend to a froth. You'll need to blend a two-egg mixture for every three rellenos.

Into a frying pan with ¼ inch of oil, spoon in frothy egg mixture about double the size and the same shape as a chili. As the batter cooks, place a stuffed chili onto its center and cover with a layer of the egg mixture. (Don't worry if it doesn't seem to hold.) As the bottom layer cooks, begin "rolling" the coating and chili with a spatula so that the batter begins to envelope the chili. Once the egg is done, the entire chili should be coated.

Place rellenos on a platter, cover each with the warmed salsa and serve.

ENCHILADAS

2 cans enchilada sauce
1 dozen corn tortillas
1 lb. ground or shredded beef, cooked
Chopped onions
Chopped cilantro
¾ lb. Monterey Jack cheese, cut into 12 3x¼-inch logs (grate the rest)
Salt and pepper
Pitted olives

You'll want to build these enchiladas to your taste. Prepare all ingredients and place on counter-top.

Warm one can of enchilada sauce on stove. In lightly oiled frying pan (next to sauce), warm tortilla thoroughly. Using tongs, remove tortilla and drain, then place in warm sauce. Make sure entire tortilla is covered with sauce, then place tortilla on working board. Placing fillings toward one edge to facilitate tight wrap, fill tortilla with meat, onions, cilantro and cheese logs. Salt and pepper to taste. Roll.

Place enchilada in rectangular casserole dish or on foil-covered cookie sheet. Repeat process with remaining tortillas. Use any leftover warmed sauce and contents of second can to cover enchiladas. Sprinkle grated cheese (and onions and cilantro, if desired) over top. Place few olives on each enchilada and bake in 350 F oven about 15 minutes, or until cheese melts.

CARNE CALIENTE

4 yellow chilies, cleaned and coarsely chopped, with seeds
2 jalapeno chilies, cleaned and coarsely chopped, with seeds
2 lbs. round steak or other moderately priced beef

In 2-quart pan, bring water to boil, and blend in yellow and jalapeno chilies (with seeds). Let chilies boil about 15 minutes.

While chilies boil, cut meat into 1- to 1½-inch chunks, removing all fat. Add meat to boiling water (add more water if necessary). Let mixture simmer about 1 hour. Drain meat thoroughly and serve (with chilies if desired) over plain rice.

Many tomatoes make years' supply of ketchup

Americans consume about 840 million bottles of catsup each year. That's about four bottles for every man, woman and child. It takes about five pounds of ripe tomatoes to make just one 32-ounce bottle of catsup. At five pounds a bottle, and four bottles per person, the average American is eating about 20 pounds of tomatoes each year in catsup alone.

Fruit-ripening bowl perfect for summer

Does a fruit-ripening bowl stay in the pantry because it is afraid to take peaches out of the pits? It can be used to promote ripening of many fruits, including plums, nectarines and pears. Other candidates for the bowl include avocados, kiwi fruits, apricots, cherries, papayas, tomatoes, cantaloupes, honeydews, mangoes, apples and bananas. Thus, it is in its prime during the summer, but can be used year-round. Some people think it makes life a bowl of cherries.

Nutrition a cure for cancer?

By Maureen Clancy
Copy News Service

Cancer is a killer. On that physicians and scientists agree.

They also tend to agree that eating a well-balanced diet rich in whole grains, fruits and vegetables will contribute to a person's overall well-being.

What they don't agree on is whether such a diet can cut down the risk of cancer.

Scores of studies and laboratory experiments have been conducted. Dozens of reports issued. But the jury is still out.

"Diet, Nutrition and Cancer" is generally regarded as the "party line" of the medical and scientific community. The lengthy report, written by the National Research Council, the action arm of the National Academy of Sciences, was commissioned by the federal Food and Drug Administration and was released in 1982.

The report concluded that while there is "insufficient data to quantitate the contribution of diet to the overall cancer risk or to determine the percent reduction in risk that might be achieved by dietary modification," certain specific foods should be avoided and others consumed in an effort to minimize cancer risk.

The report's bottom line was that between 40 percent and 60 percent of all cancer may be linked to diet.

The NAS report has since been rebutted by many other publications. It has been refined by still others. But its conclusions and recommendations have generally been endorsed by major national institutions studying the nature of cancer (including the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society).

Sushma Palmer, executive director of the National Academy of Sciences' Food and Nutrition Board and project director of the 1982 report, appeared recently at the California Dairy Council's annual Nutrition Press Conference to reiterate the importance of her report's conclusions.

Some epidemiological investigations have indicated that obesity may be a risk factor for certain cancers in humans. Joining the NAS in suggesting a reduction of fat intake to no more than 30 percent of a person's diet (the typical American diet today is 45 percent to 50 percent fat) are the National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society.

The question of fruits and vegetables is very complex. The NAS study considered both the fiber in certain vegetables and the presence of vitamins A and C. Though Palmer says that there is no concrete evidence that eating such vegetables actually prevents cancer, her report recommended that consumers eat fruits and vegetables daily and increase their consumption of "cabbage family" vegetables — along with carrots, tomatoes and citrus fruits.

At the conference, Palmer discussed the limited evidence that vitamin C prevents the formation of carcinogens such as nitrosamines. In other words, the theory is that if vitamin C is present in your stomach at the same time that nitrates (present in ham, bacon, luncheon meats) enter it, the vitamin C may prevent the nitrates from being transformed in the stomach into nitrosamines — a known cancer-causing substance. Some studies translate this into practical menu suggestions: eat an orange along with a bologna sandwich, eat cabbage with corned beef and slices of pineapple with ham.

The trusty backyard barbecue comes in for criticism in the diet-cancer debate. Excessive amounts of polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons, a known carcinogen, can enter the food supply when fat from grilling meat drips onto the hot coals and is burned, thereby generating smoke containing these hydrocarbons.

Palmer says that consumers should not throw out the backyard grill, but merely use it occasionally and cautiously (for example, using an aluminum foil barrier between the meat and the grill, or placing the coals under the edge of the grill, not directly under the meat). She also suggests trimming off all fat from meat before grilling it.

Hot dogs, bacon, luncheon meats? Though Palmer's report concluded that there is no direct evidence that nitrates and nitrites produce cancer, these substances can lead to the production of nitrosamines, which have been found to cause cancer in 20 species of animals. Nitrosamines can be produced during the frying of these meats.

The NAS report was most conclusive about the increased risk of cancer in people who smoke and drink to excess. For such people "the risk of cancer increases dramatically," says Palmer.

Not everybody agrees with the NAS's recommendations to eat more fruit and vegetables and eat less fat and processed meats. A report titled "Diet and Cancer," released recently by the American Council on Science and Health, refutes, point by point, the conclusions and recommendations offered by the NAS study.

The authors conclude that there is no concrete proof that cured and smoked meats cause a greater risk of cancer in those who eat them. Nor do they find concrete proof that a high-fiber diet prevents cancer or that certain fruits and vegetables protect against cancer.

The report's principal author, Michael Pariza, insists that there is insufficient evidence to warrant the establishment of public guidelines for diet modification for the purpose of preventing cancer.

Pariza said that advice from the medical community might aid the layperson in selecting a nutritionally adequate diet. But the idea of "eating to avoid cancer," a popular notion currently being put forth in many women's and family magazines, is false.

The ACSH is a non-profit organization directed and advised by a panel of scientists from a variety of disciplines. According to Philip L. White, director of personal and public health policy for the American Medical Association and a member of the board of advisers of the ACSH, the council's research is "funded by private industry, including segments of the food industry, chemical industries, the automotive industry" and the like.

White also was a participant in the press conference, and took the opportunity to reiterate the AMA's position on diet-cancer links — namely, that there is insufficient evidence to formulate specific dietary guidelines and that it is "inappropriate to use admonitions like eat more and eat less."

White decried the "present-day tendency to overstate the role that food and food components play" in cancer. He also voiced his fears about the development of "box-top, medicine," citing such cereals as All Bran and 40 percent Bran with their suggestive printed on the boxes that the bran in the products can prevent cancer.

The ACS also has issued nutritional guidelines that it says "may help to reduce one's chance of getting cancer." The society cautions that "no dietary advice can be given that will guarantee prevention of any specific human cancer," but issues the following recommendations:

- Avoid obesity.
- Cut down on total fat intake.
- Eat more high-fiber foods, such as fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. (With this one step beyond the NAS study that felt the value of fiber in preventing cancer was not substantiated.)
- Include foods rich in vitamins A and C in the daily diet, but avoid excessive use of supplements.
- Include cruciferous vegetables such as cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts and cauliflower in the diet.
- Be moderate in consumption of alcoholic beverages.
- Eat sparingly of salt-cured, smoked and nitrite-cured foods. (The ACS made this recommendation while simultaneously admitting that the evidence against such meats is "limited and inferential.")

Where does all this scientific hair-splitting put us, the health-conscious consumers?

For all practical purposes, most of the reports seem to be saying the same thing. There is no hard, fast data that smoked meats and barbecued foods are bad; that fruits, vegetables and fiber are good. But there is some evidence of the role that such foods play in lowering an individual's risk of developing cancer.

The differences of opinion tend to be over what to tell the consumer to do about it all.

Sunchoke recipes

Here's an unusual edible that could become a new favorite — the sunchoke. It's high in iron and vitamin B, low in calories and it's a tuber.

Also known as the Jerusalem artichoke, the sunchoke is a member of the sunflower family.

Sunchoke tubers resemble knobby potatoes and have a white, crisp, sweet flesh. They're a great addition to salads and good with dip. You can also saute them, fry them, use them in stews or, casseroles and pickle them.

Uncle Andy's Sunchokes recipe flyer will provide you with some ideas to get you started, such as "Sour Cream Scalloped Sunchokes and Ham," "Slow Cook Pot Roast with Sunchokes" and "High Fiber Sunchoke Vegetable Soup." It will even tell you how to make "Sunchoke Chips" to serve as a delicious side dish or snack.

Cool cooking for hot summer nights

By Desiree Vivea
Copley News Service

What do you do on those sultry summer nights when the thought of slaving over a hot stove is about as appealing as walking over hot coals?

Steer clear of the conventional oven, and shun the stove top. They'll only heat up the house, and you with it.

Instead, turn to that charmingly cool-cooking appliance on your countertop, and microwave an easy meal that won't leave you all steamed up.

For a tasty main dish, try Double Cheese Eggplant Bake very simply blend of ground beef, eggplant, and Parmesan and mozzarella cheeses. Once assembled, you just pop it in the microwave to cook-cook for about 20 minutes while you toss a light salad and sip something tall and icy.

Elegant Chocolate Almond Mousse takes only minutes to put together. Prepare several hours ahead of time, or make it the night before and simply refrigerate until serving time.

Remember to put mixing bowl and beaters in the freezer to chill, so that whipped cream will beat high and fluffy.

This dessert is light in texture, but rich in calories, so serve in small portions and savor every cool, creamy bite.

Why wilt your spirits over a hot stove? When the heat gets you down, keep your cool in the kitchen the microwave way.

DOUBLE CHEESE EGGPLANT BAKE
1/2 lb. lean ground beef
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced or pressed
1 medium-size (1 1/2 lb.) eggplant
1 (15 oz.) can tomato sauce
3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
3 tbsps. olive oil
1/2 tsp. ground oregano
1/2 tsp. leaf basil
1/2 tsp. garlic salt
2 cups pepper
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

Crumble beef into 1-quart glass casserole. Add onion and garlic. Cover and microwave 4 minutes, stirring after 2 minutes. Drain off fat; set aside.

Wash and peel eggplant, trim ends and cut in 1/4 inch slices. Set aside.

Combine remaining ingredients, except mozzarella, in 1-quart glass mixing bowl, stirring to blend well. Spread 3/4 cup of mixture over bottom of 13x9x2-inch glass baking dish.

Sprinkle beef evenly over top, then make two more layers of eggplant, topping each with equal amounts of remaining tomato sauce.

Cover with plastic wrap and microwave 15 minutes. Sprinkle mozzarella over top and microwave, uncovered, 4 minutes longer.

Let stand several minutes before serving.
Serves 6.

CHOCOLATE ALMOND MOUSSE
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1/4 cup cocoa
1 cup powdered sugar
5 eggs, at room temperature, separated
1 tsp. vanilla extract
1/4 tsp. almond extract
1/4 cup heavy cream
2 tbsps. powdered sugar
Several drops orange flower water (optional)
1/4 cup slivered almonds

Place butter in small glass mixing bowl and microwave until melted. Stir in cocoa and beat until thoroughly blended and smooth.

Add powdered sugar and beat until creamy. Microwave 20 to 30 seconds, or until mixture is semi-runny. Then beat in egg yolks, one at a time. Set aside.

Beat egg whites until very stiff, then beat in vanilla and almond extracts. Gradually fold beaten egg whites into chocolate mixture, blending well.

Turn mixture into six small serving dishes and chill at least 2 hours, or overnight.

When almost ready to serve, beat heavy cream in chilled mixing bowl, with chilled beaters, adding powdered sugar and orange flower water, if desired.

Serve individual dishes topped with small dollops of whipped cream and sprinkling of slivered almonds.
Serves 6.

Create air of the deli at home

Deli salads are tempting shortcuts when time is short for getting a meal on the table. However, some of that deli magic can be created at home, economically and more in tune with a family's individual tastes.

These two entree salads are easy to prepare and combine some favorite everyday and special occasion foods with good-for-you dairy products. Each recipe has only a few ingredients and simple preparation steps.

Pronto Pasta Salad, as the name implies, can be prepared in short order. It is a warm salad combining fettuccine noodles, a medley of fresh sautéed vegetables and a tasty sauce of dairy sour cream, Parmesan cheese and dry Italian salad dressing mix. Round out the menu with crisp bread sticks or toasted garlic bread, fresh fruit and a beverage.

When inviting a group of friends or tennis partners for lunch, Quick 'n' Easy Chicken Salads is a good choice. For the salad, simply mix cubed cooked chicken, chopped walnuts and cooked broccoli flowerettes with a blend of dairy sour cream and instant onion soup mix.

Serve the salad in miniature pastry shells—the kind in the frozen food case—or on split croissants.

Pronto Pasta Salad
1 cup dairy sour cream
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1 tsp. dry Italian salad dressing mix (half of 6 oz. pkg.)
3 tbsps. butter

4 cups combination of fresh broccoli flowerettes, strips of red pepper, sliced zucchini, sliced fresh mushrooms
8 oz. uncooked fettuccine noodles

Combine sour cream, cheese and salad dressing mix; set aside.

Melt butter in a large skillet. Sauté vegetables until tender-crisp, about 5 to 7 minutes.

Meanwhile, cook noodles according to package directions. Drain, add noodles to skillet with vegetables. Stir in sour cream mixture.

Toss gently over low heat until well combined and heated through. Serve immediately.

Makes 4 servings.

Quick 'n' Easy Chicken Salad
1 cup dairy sour cream
1 pkg. of (about 3/8 oz.) instant onion soup mix
2 cups cubed chicken
2 cups cooked broccoli flowerettes
1 cup chopped walnuts
8 small or 4 large pastry shells, prepared or frozen and baked

Unsalted sunflower seeds, if desired

Combine sour cream and dry soup mix; mix well.

Combine chicken, broccoli and walnuts; mix well. Stir in sour cream mixture. Chill, covered, 1 to 2 hours to allow flavors to develop.

Fill each small pastry shell with approximately 1/2 cup of chicken salad. Garnish with unsalted sunflower seeds.

Makes 4 servings.

Hank Williams Jr. a legend in his own right

By Robin Welles
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Most entertainers who follow in the footsteps of famous fathers or mothers fall miserably.

Probably the greatest exception to the rule is Hank Williams Jr., whose legendary father popularized country music back in the late 1940s with songs like "Your Cheatin' Heart." Hank Sr. died on New Year's Day 1953 at the height of his fame.

But Hank Jr. has become a legend himself as a composer/singer of country music. He has just finished his 50th album, titled "Five-O," for Warner Bros. It's a mix of fresh new songs by Williams and some others like Warren Zevon's "Lawyers, Guns and Money," and Fats Waller's classic "Ain't Misbehavin'." Also included is Williams' current single, "I'm for Love."

If anyone ever was destined to stand on his own two feet as an entertainer, it was Hank Jr. His mother, Audrey Williams, also was a country singer.

Hank Jr. was playing a guitar as soon as he was old enough to hold one, and subsequently learned how to play the banjo, fiddle, piano, bass and steel guitar, harp and other instruments. His first performance was at age 8 in Swainsboro, Ga., where he wowed the audience with "Lovesick Blues."

And he grew up in Nashville, the heart and soul of country music.

He was only 14 when he did the sound track for "Your Cheatin' Heart," the film biography of his father. Then began the long string of albums. Billboard magazine named him top male country artist in both 1972 and 1982.

Hank Williams was great all right — but so is his son.

EURYTHMICS — Be Yourself Tonight (RCA) — More rock and rhythm and blues spice this one by the specialists in electronic pop. Annie Lennox and Aretha Franklin team up for a blazing duet on "Sisters Are Doing It For Themselves." And Dave Stewart's guitar never sounded better. Also note Stevie Wonder's harmonica on "There Must Be an Angel."

FREDDIE MERCURY — Mr. Bad Guy (Columbia) — Big man of song for Queen steps out on his own for first time and, as the title song implies, delivers some real mean rock, softened now and then with a pop ballad. Queen might be in its twilight years, but there's still a large group of fans out there for both the band and its lead singer.

KARL KLUGH — Soda Fountain Shuffle (Warner Bros.) — Virtuoso acoustic guitarist Klugh plays like it is one of the easiest things in the world to do, seemingly without effort — the sign of a true artist. LP shows off his usual seamless blend of jazz and pop. But, like his last LP, there is more electronic imagery in the background.

ELN STRAUSSFEST — Cincinnati Pops Orchestra (Telarc Records) — If you can't afford the trip to Vienna, there's more than a dollar's worth in this LP. It'll take you there in spirit. Lush performances of Strauss's "Blue Danube Waltz," "Tales from the Vienna Woods," "Champagne Polka" and others. Erich Kunzel conducted.

HIGHWAYMAN — Waylon Jennings, Willie Nelson, Johnny Cash, Kris Kristofferson (Columbia) — Willie's still bashful — been hiding in a group or a duo for a long time. But what a group this one is! Hard to recall when, or if, that musical talent has performed on the same album. Maybe next up for Willie will be Gene Autry and Roy Rogers.

DIZZY GILLESPIE — New Faces (GRP Records) — Dizzy's the guy who pepped up the 1950s by playing something called bebop with a bent trumpet. Dizzy's still hanging in there and lines up on this LP with some of the finest young jazz talent around: Branford Marsalis, Kenny Kirkland, Lonnie Plaxico and Robert Ameen. Swinging stuff with all kinds of harmonic twists in the Gillespie fashion.

Films in Focus

OPENINGS

"FLETCH" (PG) Good — Chevy Chase has aged beyond smugness and now his cocky one-liners really zing appealingly. This funny, surprisingly adult comedy stars Chase as an investigative reporter and wiseguy who also is a joking, role-playing detective. He stars with easy adroitness, and Director Michael Ritchie (in a return to form) smartly doesn't use the rest of the fine cast as mere stooges for him. The jokes pingpong softly and pile up into pretty big laughs. With Joe Don Baker, Richard Libertini, Tim Matheson and smart, sensual Dana Wheeler-Nicholson.

RECENT RELEASES

"BIRDY" (R) Fair — Matthew Modine and Nicolas Cage are buddies who stick together through a wretched Philadelphia youth, the Vietnam War, hospitalization and the madly whimsical yearning to fly like a bird by Birdy (Modine). Director Alan Parker clamps them hard in his heavy, morbidly "realistic" style, and the movie never takes wing.

"HELLHOLE" (R) Not Reviewed — A woman (Judy Landers) sees her mother murdered and is terrorized by the killer (Ray Sharkey), then goes to a sanitarium where unorthodox experiments take place in the basement. It's in the faded behind-the-scenes tradition of pulp peeping. With Marjoe Gortner, Eddy Williams and Marty Wornow. Pierre De Moro directed.

"A VIEW TO A KILL" (PG) Fair — The 18th James Bond frolic runs on into what seems the 17th and 18th episodes, though Roger Moore is still a capable Bond and there's a campy frisson between ultra-white villain Zorin (Christopher Walken, having a sadistic party) and his ultra-black accomplice May Day (Grace Jones). But we also have to endure the excruciatingly dippy Tanya Roberts. Directed, with logistical savvy only, by John Glen.

David Wolper winning the miniseries war

CHARLESTON, S.C. — When producer David Wolper, whose credits include "Roots" and "The Thorn Birds," talks about his sphere of expertise, people listen.

And Wolper says that "North and South," a 10-hour drama he's producing for ABC-TV, will owe much of its clout to a coterie of young, relatively unknown performers playing key roles. They aren't without experience, but are not in the same league as Elizabeth Taylor, Robert Mitchum, Gene Kelly, Jean Simmons, Mitchell Ryan and other heavyweights who are also in the cast.

Kirstie Alley, remembered from "A Bunny's Tale," plays a high-spirited troublemaker, Yankee style. Terri Garber plays a statuesque Southern schemer. Genie Francis plays a beautiful Dixie belle, and Jonathan Frakes and Philip Casnoff play villains junior and senior grade.

With these and other attractive performers in the cast, Wolper speaks most glowingly of his two leading men, Patrick Swayze and James Read, who stand for the South and the North, respectively. Read, cast as George Hazard, secon of a Pennsylvania industrialist, says he thinks the first half of the 19th century, the period in which the show is set, is the most romantic in U.S. history.

"As a kid," he says, "I had a Confederate uniform" — which must not have been easy to come by in Schenectady, N.Y., where he was reared.

Read's first ambition was to join the Forestry Service "because I thought I could live outdoors and have a secure profession." However, by the time he finished the University of Oregon, he'd decided to enter the most insecure profession of all: acting.

Read has enjoyed his work in "North and South" for several reasons, among them the fact that the work has lasted for a couple of months.

"It's a real luxury for an actor to have a job for more than two weeks," he says. "Being able to plan your life takes away the anxiety."

Read has been asked to continue his role in "Love and War," and says, "I hunger for it to go on."

Swayze, a Texan, plays the heir to a South Carolina plantation. "I'm a Southerner," he says, "and feel very passionately about the period (of the miniseries). I think 'North and South' can make a statement."

NASHVILLE — When you write a fan letter to your favorite star, you don't expect him to answer it by showing up at your front door. But that's what happened when Hillary Kanter wrote a flattering note to James Taylor.

Hillary, today a professional singer and songwriter, still doesn't know how Taylor got the letter she wrote (the address was general) or why he decided to pay a call.

"I knew he was from Martha's Vineyard," she says, "but I didn't know whether he was there or whether he was touring or recording somewhere. But we were going to be there for a vacation, so I addressed a letter to James Taylor, Martha's Vineyard Island — and he got it."

She told him that she listened to his songs and that she was going to be a songwriter. What she didn't tell him was that she weighed only 80 pounds and was 15 years old. "When I went to the door, he looked sort of surprised," Hillary remembers. Even so, Taylor came aboard (the Kanters were on a boat) and chatted amiably with the family.

"He stayed about three hours," Hillary recollects. "To this good day I'm trying to figure out why he came. I played a couple of songs I'd written, and he told me to stay with music."

Hillary followed his advice, and with such splendid results that Dolly Parton recently recorded her song "It's Such a Heartache," and an RCA album featuring Kanter as a singer will be released sometime in June. The LP is not Hillary's first, by the way. Her first was "Hillary Kanter: Crazy in Love."

Hillary also has been a backup singer for Julio Iglesias, whom she met at his insistence while she was in Los Angeles. One of Iglesias' songwriters learned about Hillary's songs and recommended that he hear them. So the songwriter called her and explained that he worked with Iglesias and that he'd like to take one or two of her tapes to the Latin star.

And Iglesias seemed disturbed by the fact that Hillary was 27 years old and still hadn't made a name for herself. Nevertheless, when he heard her voice on the tapes, he asked her to sing backup during his forthcoming European tour.

She plans to follow Taylor's advice: Stay with music.

Joanna Barnes rises to 'Who's Who' level

By Don Freeman
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — When first I set eyes on Joanna Barnes, a few years back, she was the only actress in Hollywood who could truthfully lay claim to having a combination of the following attributes: She was a native of Boston AND a Smith College graduate AND a holder of a Phi Beta Kappa key. Of course there may be dozens of actresses around Hollywood with such credentials but this was a quick survey.

It was about then that Joanna Barnes was the subject of another distinction, to wit: They booted her out of the Social Register.

When she told me about this, I said I was sorry. "Well, I'm not," she said, airily. "I'm delighted beyond words. It can mean only one thing, that I've been recognized by the Register as an actress."

"They wrote it up in the Social Register that you're an actress?" "No, no, no," she said. "The Social Register has a big thing against such showy nonsense as the acting profession. Once they find out you're in show business — it's out for you!"

Since no one in my set had ever been kicked out of the Social Register, I wondered as to the procedure. I asked, "Do they send the mauler a testy note?"

She shook her head. "You're not even informed," she explained. "One day you look in the Social Register and your name is gone, usually forever."

Ah, but the good news, Joanna was saying the other day, is that she now is in "Who's Who" as an author. She has a novel in the stalls called "Silverwood," which has been picked up as a forthcoming TV miniseries. A Literary Guild selection for March, it's a honey of a book, all about Hollywood and Los Angeles society in the first half of this century. It's a fascinating era that Joanna explores here; the characters exude color, and there is a sharp conflict between the locals and the movie people, between society and, as she calls them, "the oddballs and gypsies of the movie business."

Joanna has written three previous books, including the 1980 best-seller, "Pastora," which is a sweeping yarn about the gold rush days in San Francisco. And she has another novel in gestation, a large family saga set in New England, which is an area and theme she knows intimately.

All of this seems fitting, for (See BARNES, Page 7C)

The Goonies is a high-action adventure film that appeals to the kid in everyone.

1 2 3 4

The Goonies

It is going to be a Goonie summer. Steven Spielberg's first of two offerings this summer (the other is called Back To The Future and is due out July 3) is a non-stop kiddie action extravaganza aimed at the eight to 18-year-old crowd. (Or any adults who feel that young on occasion.)

As The Goonies opens it's a cloudy day in the scenic seaport town of Astoria. The Goonies, a gang of youngsters dedicated to all the adventure their bikes can take them to, are lamenting the fact that the oldest of their group has just failed his first driver's test, thus condemning the Goonies to another weekend of bike riding. A visit to an attic stirs prospects, as an ancient treasure map is found. It starts the Goonies on the trail of a treasure that will enable their families not to have to sell out to a greedy land developer, who is foreclosing on most of the property in Astoria in order to construct a new country club and golf course.

Complicating the hunt is a trio of crooks lead by a guy who has just darted from the local jailhouse with the help of his motley mother and his equally undesirable brother.

The jump-off point for the treasure hunt is an abandoned restaurant high on a bluff overlooking the coastline. Once the Goonies get inside the decaying building a series of right steps in the wrong directions has them all plummeting deeper and deeper in some high adventure.

Five of the Goonies are the kind of kids who each represent a definite type. For instance, Corey Feldman as Mouth plays the know-it-all; Josh Brolin as Brand is the most mature; Sean Astin as Mickey is the almost-sensible one, and Ke Huy Quan (remember him from Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom?) is Data, the inventive one. Data is a walking arsenal of life-saving inventions that almost work, most of the time. Jeff Cohen plays Chunk, a kid whose body lives up to his name.

There are two girls in on the Goonies adventure. They are played by Kerri Green and Martha Plimpton.

Once inside the secret cave a pirate ship is discovered, along with a treasure. For those of you who have visited Disneyland or Disneyworld, the entire set is right out of Pirates of the Caribbean. It is an eye-ful.

Two of the Goonies find themselves in a tight spot.

The Goonies was directed by Richard Donner who, among other films, directed the original (and best) Superman film plus The Omen. Donner, who I have had the pleasure of meeting and interviewing on two occasions, is a bit of a 52-year-old kid himself. So The Goonies comes off as an adventure for the children that still manages to tug at the child still remaining in every adult. Sometimes the action is so hurried and hurried that the breathless lines of the kids are very difficult to understand. The Goonies is a noisy film that has to be listened to very carefully. Many old tricks are used for comedy. They all work wonderfully, even if they are not exactly a surprise. The film's ending is, as you might expect, an exhilarating one. The Goonies has character and characters. It is funny, breakneck and exciting. Your children will love it. So will you.

This is the plant that manufactures our sauce.

Other pizza makers will proudly tell you they manufacture their sauce in the highest standards. Note: They manufacture it in huge factories. In vast quantities, with enough preservatives to make it last a long time. At Little Caesars® our sauce is all natural. The tomatoes, the spices, everything. The truth is, our sauce isn't made. It's grown. So naturally it tastes better. And we make it fresh every day.

Unfinished castle offers an eerie treat

Boldt Castle is a fairyland castle in a fairy-tale setting, but unfortunately this story didn't have a happy ending.

George C. Boldt, an immigrant from Prussia, arrived in the United States in 1864 with big dreams but no money. In a classic rags-to-riches tale, he worked a menial job in a hotel into a mighty empire, becoming owner of the legendary Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City and the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia.

His dream was to build a castle for his princess, his young wife, Louise. It was to be the grandest castle ever built, modeled after the 14th century German castles on the Rhine River, which he had seen when he was a child.

Ever the romantic, he decided to give the castle to his true love on her birthday, Feb. 14, Valentine's Day. He bought an island in the middle of the St. Lawrence River, the Thousand Islands region between New York and Ontario. He had the island reshaped into a heart, and called it Heart Island.

He employed 300 workmen for two years to build his magnificent $2 million, six-story, 120-room castle overlooking the river. The family would come out to the island in summer to picnic and play, and stayed in the playhouse until the castle was completed.

Then, just before the castle was completed, tragedy struck. His wife, the love of his life, died suddenly in January 1904. Boldt sent out an urgent telegram to the workmen to stop work and go home.

Boldt never returned to his castle, and the building was never completed. Since then, the ravages of nature and vandals have torn and tattered the mansion.

If there is any joy in this story, it is the happiness this castle provides to the thousands of tourists who visit the island and the partially completed castle every year. It is now owned by the Thousand Islands Bridge Authority, and is being restored to its former glory.

The only way to get to the castle is by boat. But that is no problem because numerous excursion boats ply the waters of the islands every day in summer. They leave from Alexandria Bay, N.Y., as well as three cities on the Canadian side. They include an unlimited stop at Heart Island, as well as one or two hours cruising the beautiful island-studded river.

Once on the island, visitors are free to roam wherever they want, poking into deserted buildings, walking through half-finished formal gardens and exploring the castle. It is like peering into a man's dreams.

The first structure on the island was the playhouse, or Alster Tower, a mansion in its own right. This summer home was used by the family until the mansion was to be completed.

In the basement was a two-lane bowling alley, and the first floor contained a ballroom called the Shell Room because of its unusual ceiling. There also was a billiard room, grill, library, cafe and kitchens, with bedrooms on the second floor.

Although the building is closed now, by peering through a window the curious can still see the remains of the bowling alley and exquisite interior details.

Boldt had a lagoon built half-way around the island, with a landscaped promenade skirting it. He built an ornate Arch of Triumph, which still stands, serving as the water entrance to the lagoon.

He built a powerhouse on a tiny islet connected to the main island by a small bridge. It was built in the guise of a medieval castle. Inside was the generating plant that would supply electricity for lighting, to pump water for domestic use and to run the motors for the elevator and other machines in the castle.

But it is the castle that attracts the most attention. Boldt brought craftsmen from all over the world to create his chateau. He imported spotless white Carrara marble from Italy for the fireplaces, and had mosaics and tapestries imported from Europe to decorate the building. The granite for the building was brought from his quarries on a nearby island.

Visitors get an eerie feeling walking into the castle today. Some of the intricately carved ceilings can still be seen, but they are peeling and falling. The magnificent marble stairway rising through the middle of the house was never completed, and is now a makeshift wooden one.

Naked light bulbs hang by exposed wires. In places, the walls have been defaced by vandals. Scattered around the house are rusted radiators and half-finished bathrooms. There is no elevator in the empty shaft.

A stairway leads down to the basement level. Here is Boldt's elegant indoor swimming pool in a circular room, now just a muddy pond in the basement. Also in the basement were to be a lounge, organ mechanical area, boiler and passageways leading to other buildings on the grounds, so servants and supplies could be moved about the island without the family having to see them.

The dining room on the first floor has been reconstructed and filled with antiques to show the opulence in which the family would have lived once they moved into the castle, which was to serve only as their summer home. The ballroom now serves as a theater where visitors can watch a slide show about this unusual house and the man who built it.

Entrance to the castle today is ways put us smoothly into London for a few days before heading — enough time to overcome jet lag, enjoy the always fascinating city, catch a few plays and practically buy out Foyle's bookstores.

(Royal Cruises offers a couple superb London packages to be taken either before or after the cruise itself — highly recommended.)

Then off we went to Tilbury and the nearby deserted Port of London. It's an amazing trip through the very old East End of the city which was once the Jewish quarter and now is mainly a light manufacturing and industrial center. The bus wandered on through the marshlands of Essex toward a countryside filled with tiny patches of vegetable gardens and on into real farmhouses. A bright guide from the cruise line filled us in on history and added sharp comments on the economy in general, so the long ride passed quickly.

We found the guides, the staff and the port lecturer amazingly knowledgeable and always helpful — a decided asset for some cruises where staff know little more than that lady wanting fords for her dollars.

Once aboard, it doesn't take long to settle into the comfortable cabins and explore the ship and check the upcoming activities. There's a wonderful, contagious sense of excitement at such a time, and passengers are soon smiling and chatting with each other like old friends.

Royal Cruise Lines has, in addition to regular cruise staff dedicated to making the trip a happy time, a special group of hosts to assist anyone needing a little extra attention. Charming, affable and gracious, they are a great asset to the trip — especially to the single ladies aboard.

Heading for the open sea is always a thrill and, staring at the lights of the now-distant city and the channel that leads north, it's easy to think about the early explorers, traders and sailors who made their way here for centuries in craft far less comfortable than the Royal Odyssey.

Time enough for history and contemplation — the routines of shipboard demand attention. The Royal Odyssey is sister to the Golden Odyssey which Royal Cruise Line has run so successfully for the last 10 years. Her Greek owners are pleased with 90 percent occupancy rates — and obviously her passengers are pleased with the way things are run.

The Greek crew is amiable, affable and experienced. The dining room runs smoothly, offering a varied and beautifully prepared menu that includes Greek dishes and lots of fresh fish and seafood. The wine list is excellent, the desserts absolutely sinful and the whole dining experience rates high with even the most jaded travelers.

There is so much to do every day, the list of daily activities keeps the printer up all night getting it together. Games, lectures, sports, conferences, movies and, in the evenings, outstanding show times put wings on time. And, of course, there are the ports.

Copenhagen — its color and history spill forth on every street, every flowered square and park, and all of it culminates in an all too short visit to the magical fairland of Tivoli Gardens. Denmark is so energetic, so vital, it's hard to absorb it all at once. Where else would people heat a lake for the birds in winter? And flowers be as essential a part of the housewives' market as bread? A day or two is not enough — a week or two would barely suffice, but passengers see just enough to promise themselves a return visit at another time.

After all, that's what cruises are designed to do. They give you a sample of the best a city has to offer — perhaps an excellent guided tour through the historical highlights, a chance to wander through the parks and gardens, an opportunity to visit the market-places, shops and restaurants, a little while to talk with local people (in most of Scandinavia, English is the common second language). Port calls are a tantalizing kaleidoscope of life — and a marvelous opportunity to decide to return to the places that intrigue you most.

And the aspect of coming into these cities from the sea — the way they were first founded, and later developed, the way they were known to each other for centuries — adds a special dimension to even a short visit.

Stockholm, with its myriad islands, is a special enchantment from aboard ship.

Sight of the long, constantly dredged channel that limits the possible number of ships going in or out of Leningrad gives you a sudden glimpse of the importance of this port that Peter the Great created.

The coastline here is tricky, marshy and full of scalloped bays. Suddenly, the history of the area comes into focus. The port was essential to the enormous landmass of Russia — and worth fighting the world to create it.

We walked among acres of huge packing cases of goods headed for Soviet-friendly countries and thrilled to be there. The Soviets we encountered were polite, enjoying the beautiful day and not at all interested in the Americans. We visited the Hermitage — it would take months to explore its glories. At the Moscow Hotel we ate a classic Russian meal, listened to standard Russian music and watched some highly stylized folk dancers. Then we persuaded the guide to take us for a ride on the subway — clean, swift, cheap — and to stop at a bakery to buy some pirosky, the fabled Russian meat and cabbage-filled dumplings.

The guide, a charming young woman from a nearby university, chatted easily in English — she even offered to buy the pirosky — and talked of her life and ambitions. Looking at the young woman from the ship who escorted us, she asked, "You're 30?" "Yes, and not married," she grinned. "Me, too, don't your parents object?" "They sure do!" We all laughed. The Russian guide continued, "But I lead a good life, I have my studies, my friends, I like it this way."

That evening passengers had the choice of a visit to the ballet or a lecture on life in Leningrad. Those who went to the ballet came back late, raving about the enthusiasm of the troupe — some of the singers and dancers from the ship had gone along and were welcomed as fellow workers. Once again a meeting of interests made friendship possible.

The lecturer, an obviously well-educated and well-spoken man, fielded questions from the floor with ease and grace and drew pictures of everyday life in the beautiful city that were a revelation.

We are more alike than most of us have the opportunity to realize.

And so it went. Long, lazy days at sea to think about the places we visited were interspersed with port calls that were successively intriguing.

Life in the long, cold climates does not draw most people, but seeing it this way, from the solid comfort of the Royal Odyssey, adds a new depth and dimension to understanding not only the land, but the strong and beautiful people who inhabit it and find strength and happiness there.

A body-and-soul-satisfying cruise. Highly recommended!

Metro West dumps East prep stars, 2-1

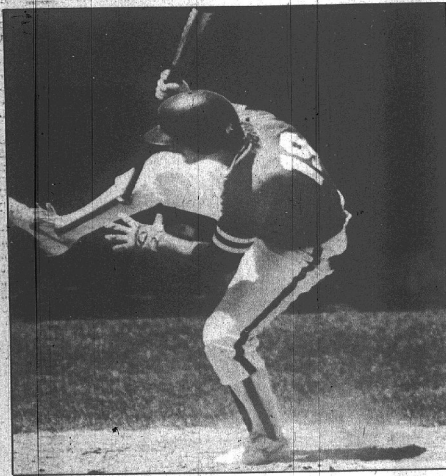

PLATE DANCE: Granite City's Shane Cole bails out as he is hit by a pitch during the Illinois-Missouri all-star high school baseball game at SIU's Cougar Field.

EDWARDSVILLE — It's been a memorable year for John Burroughs' pitcher Andy Katzman. This spring he helped lead Burroughs to Missouri state baseball championship and Sunday he provided the guts and hustle needed in a 2-1 win for the Metro West All-Stars of Missouri over the Metro East squad of Illinois at Cougar Field.

Katzman's role in the victory, however, was not without hardship. With the score tied at 1-1 in the eighth inning, Katzman was hit in the head by a pitch that got away from Civic Memorial's Randy Eaton.

Katzman went down in a heap. Stunned, but okay he stayed in the game to run the bases.

"He's a tough kid," said Jeff Elder of Hazelwood West, the Metro West coach. "When he heard I was planning to take him out, he bounced right back up."

Katzman promptly swiped second and went to third on an infield out by Alan Wilmes of St. Dominic. Hazelwood Central's Pat Gerwitz then lined a bases clearing double. Katzman with what turned out to be the winning run.

"I guess I took one for Missouri," Katzman said from the dugout. "I'm okay. I'm just ringing big time."

The Metro East team, composed of Illinois high school seniors, loaded the bases in the ninth. Triad's Brian Kelly and Tony Clark of Waterloo walked. Elder then brought in Ritenour's Ron Forbes to relieve Hazelwood Central's Rob Trautman. Dan Fitzgerald of Alton Marquette greeted Forbes with a perfect bunt, loading the bases.

Pinch hitter Eaton bounced to the first baseman who threw home to force Kelly. Kelly went in hard at catcher Brett Voyppick of DeSmet and was ejected. He also failed to slide and Eaton was called out as a result of interference, giving the West team a double play.

"That's a rule that we stressed to the kids before the game," Elder said. "You have got to slide. If you're playing little league or dominoes, you are after another walk, Edwardsville's Bob Hostro went after a low, outside pitch from Forbes and fanned, ending the game."

"I wish I could have that one back," Hostro said afterwards. "That hurts."

It was only fitting that a strike out ended the game, because pitching dominated. Both staffs combined to yield just nine hits — four by the Metro West and five by the Illinois stars. Katzman allowed the East's only run in the first. Pat Little of Civic Memorial was hit by a pitch, he stole second and third and easily trotted home on a single by Mater Dei's Mark Neff.

Perhaps the most impressive pitcher for the West was Mark Bozich of DuBourg. Bozich, a left-hander, hurled just two innings, but fanned four of the six batters he faced.

Triad's Chris Becherer walked, but quickly was picked off. Edwardsville's P.J. Riley singled, but was left stranded a third, after a balk and a wild pitch.

Bozich had Riley picked off but the throw was dropped by the first baseman.

"They called the balk because they said I went over the line," Bozich said. "I don't think I did."

Webster Groves' Dave Black pitched two more scoreless innings for the West as did SLUH's Matt McGrath.

For Illinois, the pitchers were equally effective. Carlyle's Jason Backs pitched three scoreless innings allowing only two hits and one run. Ron Tedder of Waterloo pitched three scoreless innings and Eaton gave up just two hits.

"I really thought this would be a 10-9 game," said Elder. "In all-star games the hitters usually hit well." Pile, on the other hand, knew it would be tough to score runs. "For the most part good pitching always seems to dominate good hitting. So, I was expecting it to be close."

After the Metro East grabbed a 1-0 lead in the first, the West team tied the game in the second.

Hazelwood East's Jeff Whitting walked and scored on an infield out by Forbes.

Aside from the good pitching there were also sparking plays in the field.

In the first, Trautman gunned out Neft trying to stretch his single into a double. In the fifth, he dove and caught a slicing fly ball off the bat of Mascoutah's Chris Vonderlinden.

"Overall, I think the game was a success," said Pile. "We achieved what we set out to do, which was to produce a quality product. It was a well-played game."

Unlike many all-star games, this was a contest of emotion. That was best witnessed in the ninth as Forbes was trying to save the win for McGrath. The West squad was starting in front of the dugout. They could taste victory.

"These guys really wanted to win this one," Elder said. "I could sense that on the bench."

Elder said the West team didn't practice before the game. "I met most of the players for the first time Sunday."

NOTES: This is the first Missouri-Illinois all-star game, but the second Pile has put together. Last year he organized an all-Illinois game. Each player received a framed certificate in the game. Granite City's two representatives, although they didn't figure in the scoring, got to play. Shane Cole started the game in left field and played four innings. In his first at bat, Cole was hit by a pitch, but was thrown out trying to steal second. Pat Cathey was the designated hitter and also played at first base. Cathey reached base twice. He walked in the fifth and reached via a fielder's choice in the seventh.

Junior legion squad hopes practice will help its voices

By JOE THOMPSON
Of the Journal Staff

GRANITE CITY — Granite City Junior Legion's baseball team opened its season on June 2. That was a while ago. School was still in session. The Cubs and Mets still were chortling it over the rest of the National League East, only mildly disturbed by the rumblings of Vince Coleman and the Redbirds, who were only beginning to make their charge to the top.

A lot of things have happened since, except the Hogan Plumbing's baseball schedule. Rain proceeded to wash out the Junior Warriors' next four games.

They finally got to play last Thursday, and whipped Dupo, 9-2, on a three run homer by Todd Hinterser and the pitching of Jay Valbert. The victory made up for their 3-2 loss to Freeburg in the opener way back when.

Hogan Plumbing were most impressive Saturday in the first inning of their subsequent 6-4 loss to Collinsville, who with lanky, hard-throwing Sam Lance posed a much stiffer challenge than Dupo.

After a Collinsville run in the first, Tim Hogan started the Warriors' first inning with a sharp single through the middle of the infield. Jamie Hogan followed with a walk. Hinterser got Tim Hogan home with a ground out to the shortstop for the first run.

Then Todd Adams sent one of Lance's low fastballs towering over the left field fence for two more runs. It was Adams' first homer of the season.

Not to be, Hogan Plumbing collapsed defensively in a series of errors, walks, passed balls and wild pitches. Thank you, said Collinsville, which scored four runs in the first three innings on only an infield single, and did not hit the ball into the outfield.

Jeff Zukas was Hogan Plumbing's hard-luck hurler. He allowed just three hits, two of which did not make it past the infield, in the four innings he tolled. Heck, none of the outs got out of the infield, either.

Hogan Plumbing drops 6-4 decision to Collinsville and after game holds practice session to sharpen skills.

However, Zukas walked six batters, although two came after errors allowed the innings to continue longer than the normal allotment of three outs.

Those lousy errors again. There were seven in all. Just one Collinsville run was earned.

"We stunk," said Hogan coach Paul Kacera.

The players weren't too pleased with their effort, either. So, after the contest was over, several Hogan Plumbing players trotted out to the diamond and, that's right, worked out. "We haven't had any practice yet," said Jamie Hogan, before taking his place at shortstop.

No wonder their play wasn't all that crisp. "It's been a rainy season," reminded brother Tim Hogan, loosening up before knocking out ground balls to Hinterser at third and Jamie Hogan at short.

Hinterser misplayed two balls at third base during the game, the first leading to a run. Jamie Hogan, who came up with the most dazzling play defensively with a strong throw from deep short to cut down a Collinsville would-be scorer at home plate, miscued once. That, too, led to a run.

Catcher Dave Bamber also had difficulties. His errant throw in the second allowed Collinsville's Dan Kolb, who had struck out, to reach third. From there, Kolb scored when Joe Crawford's grounder, slipped under the glove of Darrin Hendrickson at first.

Hinterser, Tim and Jamie Hogan weren't alone on the hot diamond. Scott LeVaut, who pitched the final three innings, caught the throws at first. Mike Georgeff helped out by relaying LeVaut's throws home to Tim Hogan.

"He's a young guy. They can do it," said Kacera, when asked what he thought of the extra effort. "He's out there, they kinda eat, sleep, and drink baseball. They're down. They know they lost the ballgame today," said assistant coach Marty LeVaut, Scott's father.

Another parent, Jake Hinterser, said of the added scrimmaging, "It never hurts."

Hogan Plumbing did threaten to make up for their shortcomings defensively, rallying in the last two innings against Lance. Adams hit off the bases in the sixth, and after Tim Patterson and Bamber were retired, Wilson walked to load the bases. But Lance fanned LeVaut to end the frame.

In the seventh, Tim and Jamie Hogan were retired but Hinterser singled sharply to centerfield to begin another rally. Adams followed Hinterser with an infield single. Collins and Patterson walked to score one run, but Bamber grounded out to end the game.

Then Hogan Plumbing worked out amongst themselves. "You know what they say about practice. 'We'll get in the groove,'" said Kacera.

Hogan Plumbing will host Alton on June 20 at 6 p.m. and plays two games this weekend. On Saturday they host East Alton at 6 p.m. and on Sunday they visit the Alton Optimist for a 1 p.m. game.

High-flying Birds look like serious contenders now

By GREG MARECEK
Journal Columnist

Berie isn't it. I'd talk in terms of reincarnation except that the "original" Lou Brock is alive, well and himself a witness to the Cardinal phenomena Vince Coleman.

It's been 21 years since Brock was acquired from the Chicago Cubs, and ignited a sluggish Cardinal to the 1964 world championship.

Pennants, championships, even the smell of first place are just dreams to the '85 edition, but No. 29, young Coleman's affect on this club is bearing striking similarities to the heroics of the 1964 "Base Burglar" Brock. Coleman has shattered the concentration of pitcher after pitcher, and Cardinal hitters Willie McGee, the National League's leading hitter Tom Herr and slugger Jack Clark are all benefitting.

All three are better hitters with Coleman on base. While his inexperience has resulted in a few ill-timed outs, his 40-plus stolen bases have ignited numerous Cardinal rallies.

When those of us in the media picked the Cardinals to finish fourth or lower in the National League East during spring training, there was no anticipation of Lou Brock's "clone" coming to life in the form of Coleman. And of course, as tight as the race appears, to be in the always competitive East, someone can finish fourth and only lose the division by a couple of games, anyway.

But once again the Cardinal pieces have been put together masterfully by the man I haven't yet stopped calling the best manager in baseball — Whitey Herzog. Those who would have had his head should have theirs examined.

A Herzog move which has helped trigger the Red Birds run at the top is the decision to permanently anchor former outfielder Jack Clark at first base and position Andy Van Slyke in right field full time. Stabilizing the previously nomadic role of Van Slyke, appears to have relaxed his bat and given him more time to concentrate on hitting. He's been at or above the .300 for most of the season.

Herzog is doing it again. He

has a knack of developing a team of role players like he did in '82. He has the jackrabbits, Coleman, McGee and Herr at the top of the lineup, his one slugger, Clark to drive them in, and guys like Van Slyke, Ozzie Smith and Tom Nieto who'll battle you to get on.

I know, I shouldn't count my chickens before they're hatched, but actually, what Whitey was telling us laughably in spring training may be true — this may be a better overall team than the World Champions of '82 — minus the bullpen ace Bruce Sutter.

Management lost his sure save in the bullpen, so Whitey has gotten creative and it's working. He keeps them guessing out in the bullpen, not hesitating to bring in anyone in any situation.

The corps on call is Ricky Horton and Ken Dayley from the left side, Bill Campbell and Jeff Lahti from the right.

In the all-purpose utility role, and giving the Cards even more good outings than they could have hoped for, is Bob Forsch (4-4). Forsch has started, come in long relief, middle relief, and last Friday Herzog called on Forsch in Chicago to nail down the Birds' first win over the Cubs.

Missing from the formula is this year's disappointment, Neil Allen. Allen is pitching like he's lost all confidence. After feeling sorry for the hard-thrower who now finds himself friendless outside the clubhouse, you wish for his good and the team's good, a trade.

Allen represents failure on this club, so it'd be best to get him out-of-sight and out-of-mind.

Pre-season analysts said the Cardinals couldn't compete without great years from Darrell Porter behind the plate, Van Slyke and a steady Allen. Only one of three is having a good year, but of course, Coleman's rise, Herr's hot start and Joaquín Andujar's tremendous leadership in gathering 12 wins on the mound have overshadowed any disappointments.

One thing Whitey could be right about. His starting pitching is better now than it was when he won in '82. Andujar at 12-1 and Danny Cox at 8-2 for a combined 20-3 are on their way to bettering the Andujar-Forsch combo in '82. Lefty John Tudor is a key. He's now given the Birds three solid performances during the current win streak.

If I sound like I'm putting the Cardinals into contention for the NL East title with the threesome already declared in the race (Chicago, New York and surprising Montreal) you're right.

Only injury to any of the Cardinals' key performers Clark, Herr, Smith, Coleman or McGee could send the club reeling. St. Louis' most glaring weakness is its team depth, making serious injury the biggest risk.

How mature is this new Cardinal formula? An indication might be found on this homestead where the media crush and the fan interest will test the mettle of the Birds.

They could be even or ahead in the standings with nine of their next 12 dates at Busch. Make no mistake. In '64, the speed and on-base ability of Brock won St. Louis its first pennant in 18 years. In '82, the speed and on-base ability of Willie McGee, ignited the champion Cardinal attack. In '85, the similar attributes of Coleman are triggering the Cardinals' surge.

The Cardinals chances of competing for divisional title will rest in large part on whether Coleman's incredible start is a short term phenomena or long term fact.
